FRANK'S FATE WILL BE IN HANDS OF JURY THIS AFTERNOON

CLAYTON REFUSES WHEN SPEER ASKS COPY OF CHARGES

Georgia Judge Is Promised Fair and Courteous Treatment at Hands of Committee, However.

DELEGATION ARRIVES AT NO CONCLUSION

In Communication to Chairman Clayton, of Judiciary Committee, Judge Speer Defends Official Record.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 22.—(Special.) Representative Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, chairman of the judiciary committee of the house, which is investigating the report of Judge Emory Speer made by the department of justice examinera, today received a letter from Judge Speer asking for a copy of these reports.

Representative Clayton declined to meet this request, but said the matter would be laid before the committee at its meeting next Monday.

"I must say now for the committee," continued Mr. Clayton's letter, "that you shall have that fair and courteous treatment at the hands of the committee to which your high place entitles you. Should it be deemed essential or proper for you to be present at any investigation you will be advised in ample time.

"I do not feel authorized in saying the committee will furnish you with a copy of the report made by the examiners. The committee has not gone far enough with its reading of the report to determine upon what course of action shall be pursued. Following the meeting on Monday I shall make further answer to your letter."

Members of the Georgia delegation had another conference today on the Speer case, but reached no conclusion as to what action they should take.

SPEER DEFENDS RECORD AND ASKS FOR HEARING

Mt. Airy, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Judge Emory Speer has sent the following letter to Hon. Henry D. Clayton, chairman of the house judiciary committee, which has now under consideration the charges preferred against Judge Speer through the medium of the department of justice.

Judge Speer's Letter.

Mount Airy, Ga., August 21, 1913.

Hon. Henry D Clayton, Chairman House Judiciary Committee, Washington, D. C. My Dear Mr. Clayton: I gather from the afternoon papers yesterday that your committee has under consideration a certain report relative to myself made either by the attorney general or R. Colton Lewis, an examiner of the department of justice. If in your judgment, or that of the committee, my personal or judicial honor is injuriously affected by that report, I respectfully ask a hearing by the committee at a time when it is possible for me to appear. That is unhappily impossible at present. I am a hay fever sufferer. The malady attacks me on or about the 21st of August, with unvarying severity and in a short time. If I do not seek an exempt spot, asthma and the most painful suffocation ensues with serious results. If I should attempt to come to Washington city at this time, or before frost, it would seriously endanger my health and possibly my life. I can show this by the most competent physicians. I therefore beg a hearing if you deem it necessary at a time when I will have been relieved of this affliction that it will be safe for me to appear before the committee. To this end and in order that I may make my defense in time, I respectfully ask for a copy of the accusation against me. At present I am uninformed save by rumor, and the ex-parte statements of offices and others with whom the examiner has sought interviews.

At this time I ask permission to submit the statement following:

If the substance of the alleged report of the attorney general, sent out from Washington to the afternoon papers of yesterday is not inaccurate, he has been seriously misinformed it is true that my son-in-law, Mr. Hay-

BRYAN GIVES AID IN CURRENCY FIGHT

Lines Up With Underwood and Turns Tide in Caucus in Favor of Administration Bill.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, August 22.—(Special.)—Secretary of State Bryan today lined up with Representative Oscar W. Underwood in favor of the administration currency bill, and against Representative Henry, of Texas, a long-time Bryan supporter, who is now leading the radical democratic opposition to the measure.

In giving this eleventh hour support, Mr. Bryan turned the tide in the house democratic caucus in favor of the administration bill. He further evened up honors with Mr. Underwood with whom he had a controversy over free wool two years ago that has become famous in democratic tariff history. Mr. Underwood, against his better judgment, yielded last spring to Mr. Bryan on free wool and sugar, which were put in the pending tariff bill.

The currency fight today was over the Henry amendment to prevent interlooking directorates on national banks. Mr. Underwood wanted this amendment referred to the judiciary committee for consideration in connection with anti-trust legislation, as provided for in the Baltimore platform.

Representative Hardwick, of Georgia, sought to table Mr. Underwood's motion and failed by a vote of 60 to 145, and the Underwood motion was then passed, 132 to 60.

Secretary Bryan, in a letter addressed to Chairman Glass of the currency committee, approved the bill as it stands, declaring President Wilson had recognized fundamental rights of popular control in its provisions. He asserted that the plank of the democratic platform against interlocking directorates was aimed chiefly at trusts, and he urged democrats to "stand by the president" and not to load down the currency bill with any amendments which might endanger its early passage.

Fortified with the backing of one of the makers of the Baltimore platform, Representatives Glass and Underwood met the demand for an amendment to prohibit interlocking directorates with a counter proposal that the democrats of the house take up general legislation against interlocking directorates at the next session.

A resolution by Representative Underwood, adopted by a vote of 130 to 60, referred the entire subject to the democratic members of the judiciary committee on the house and directed them to bring in a bill at the next session of congress that would prevent interlocking directorates of all kinds.

Final Victory Assured.

Administration leaders tonight said the large vote that supported the Underwood motion and the hearty approval that greeted Secretary Bryan's endorsement of the bill, assured the approval of the complete Glass bill with but little change. There remain several important amendments to be considered, but it was declared that the only important modification would be a change to make it clear that agricultural paper will be given the same credit as commercial or industrial paper.

The amendment over which the fight waged throughout the day had been offered by Representative Neeley, of Kansas, one of the so-called "insurgent" members of the banking and currency committee. It was not until after the close of the session that Chairman Glass, after declaring that President Wilson did not want such an amendment incorporated in the bill, brought forth the Bryan letter. He also produced a letter addressed to him by Samuel Untermeyer, who was counsel for the Pujo money trust committee, saying he did not believe the interlocking directorate provision should be in the currency bill.

Objecting members who had questioned Mr. Glass' interpretation of the president's attitude gave way before the vigorous assertions of Secretary Bryan and a vote quickly settled the question.

Advocates Such a Law.

In his letter Mr. Bryan declared that for many years he had advocated a law preventing a duplicating of directorates.

"While the principle applies to banks

MAN WHO HELPED THAW TO ESCAPE MAY TURN TRAITOR

"Gentleman Roger" Thompson, Driver of Black Car, Threatens to Squeal Unless Aided by Prisoner's Family.

THAW HAS QUARREL WITH HIS LAWYERS

He Insists on Talking Despite Their Warning — Declares That Matteawan Gatekeeper Is Entirely Innocent.

Sherbrooke, Quebeck, August 22.—"Gentleman Roger" Thompson, the New York chauffeur held under the dominion immigration laws as having aided Harry K. Thaw, legally a lunatic, to cross the Canadian frontier, announced from his cell tonight that he was "up against it," and that if the Thaw family did not come to his rescue he would perhaps in justice to himself be forced to tell all he knows about Thaw's escape from Matteawan, and thus complicate the proceedings under which Thaw's lawyers hope to obtain his release on a writ of habeas corpus next Wednesday.

Tonight Thompson removed the smoked eyeglasses he is worn since his arrest, and openly admitted that the name "Mitchell Thompson" he had given the authorities was fictitious, and that in reality he is Roger Thompson, car salesman and daredevil chauffeur, who drove the black machine which whisked Stanford White's slayer away from Matteawan.

Up to the Thaws.

"Sure, I'm Roger Thompson," he said. "I need money and help now, and it is up to the Thaws. I was framed up in getting into this case, and they ought to stand by me now. I haven't a cent, and if they admitted me to bail I couldn't raise the money. Even if I could, I would be arrested if I crossed the New York state line. It's rough stuff. The other four fellows mixed up in the game made their getaway. But I stuck to Thaw to the finish, and I'm the goat. That's pretty hard."

"What about the details of the escape?" he was asked.

"Don't ask me," said Thompson. "I can't talk about that now."

Thaw, in a cell above "Gentleman Roger," refused even to admit he had ever seen him. "Oh, that man," he exclaimed. "You know I can't talk about him."

Counsel has been employed for Thompson by the Thaw family, and it was through their efforts that his arraignment today as a violator of the immigration laws was postponed until Friday next. His lawyer is Louis St. Laurent, of Quebec. It was admitted by the chauffeur that "the Thaws" had retained St. Laurent, and that they expected him (Thompson) to "keep his mug shut." He added grimly that he thought they ought to do more than give him a lawyer.

"All they want," he said, "is to keep my case separate from Thaw's. I wish I hadn't mixed up in it."

Thaw Fights Lawyers.

Thaw had a quarrel with his many attorneys today. They had warned him to issue no statements, but he insisted on talking about what he described as an omission on the part of newspapers in Canada and the United States in not printing in full a recent statement of his lawyers quoting William Travers Jerome as saying Thaw was sane.

"This omission has outraged the British idea of fair play," said Thaw. "They believe in a square deal." He fidgeted as he spoke, bit his nails to the quick, and crumpled up a pile of letters and telegrams on the pine table in his cell. On the window sill stood

Grant Park Children Capture Championship At Annual Field Day Exercises Held Friday

Miss Annie W. Hill, Director of the Grant Park Playground, congratulating James Wright, of Grant Park, on his victory in winning the 75-yard dash for senior boys.

In spite of the rain which threatened all day, more than 5,000 people gathered at the city playground in Grant park Friday afternoon to witness the annual field day exercises of Atlanta's school children. Over 700 children, representing every public school in the city of Atlanta, were on hand to take part in the various contests and each point was hotly contested by the wildly enthusiastic boys and girls.

The children were divided into groups from the various playgrounds in which they take their daily exercises and were under the supervision of their different park directors. They were brought to the Grant park grounds by special cars, arriving about 3 o'clock. As soon as all were assembled they were taken by their directors to the spot which each playground contingent had been allotted and were grouped in a large circle.

Cheers for Old Glory.

No more impressive sight could be conceived than when more than 1,200 people, most of them small children, broke out in a mighty pgolonged cheer as Frank Reynolds, vice president of the park board, assisted by M. B. Young, member of the playground commission, hoisted "Old Glory" to the top of the flagpole, while the Fifth regiment band, which had been engaged for the occasion, played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The different events scheduled for the day were divided into four classes, those for senior boys over the age of 9, those for junior boys ranging in age from 6 to 9, those for senior girls over 9 years of age and those for junior girls aged from 6 to 9. Each contest counted 9 points to the winner, the first scoring 5 points, the contestant coming second being credited with 3 points and the third being given 1 point, all of which were credited to the playground of the winning contestants, and were totaled afterward, the playground scoring the largest number of points from all contests to be given the championship pennant of Atlanta playgrounds for the year 1913.

On account of the length of time

DORSEY'S SPEECH ATTACKING FRANK IS HALTED FRIDAY BY ADJOURNMENT

"I Care Not for Your Good Opinion," He Told Attorneys for Defense, "For if You Put the Stamp of Your Approval Upon My Conduct of This Case, I Will Know That I Have Not Measured Up to My Duty, to My Conscience, and the State"—Says Conley Will Never Be Indicted While He Is Solicitor.

TUMULTUOUS APPLAUSE GIVEN THE SOLICITOR BY CROWD ON STREET

Luther Z. Rosser Made Final Speech for Defense in Morning, His Address Ranging From Bitterest Sarcasm and Abuse of the Negro Conley, the Detective Department, Dalton and Others, to a Sharp Criticism of the Solicitor for His Conduct of the Case.

When Solicitor Hugh Dorsey stepped from the courtroom Friday afternoon after he had completed the first half of his speech he was greeted with tumultuous applause from the crowd which had poured from the courtroom, and was waiting for a sight of the man who has waged such an uphill fight against such overpowering odds during the past four weeks.

The police had little warning of the demonstration. It was spontaneous, and as soon as it had spent itself the crowd dispersed quietly.

Frank, in the meantime, had been rushed to the Tower in an automobile which had been standing at the rear door, cranked up and in readiness to make the trip.

For two hours the crowd had been hanging on the words of the solicitor, who was making one of the most impassioned speeches of his career—a speech which sparkled with surprises as lightning sometimes plays from a clear, blue sky. There was no chance for applause in the courtroom. The crowd had been warned that any demonstration would mean the ejec-

SECOND ACCIDENT FATAL TO PARKER

Having Just Recovered From Injuries Received in Railroad Wreck, Man Is Killed by Street Car.

After having been out of bed only a few days as a result of a railroad accident, O. A. Parker, a middle-aged man, of 789 Ashby street, was struck by a Marietta street car at Ashby and Marietta streets yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and was rushed to the Atlanta hospital in Greenberg & Bond's ambulance, where he died at 4 o'clock.

He suffered a fractured skull, and three fractures of the right leg. He was unconscious when picked up and died without giving an account of the accident.

According to the street car authorities, Parker stepped in front of the car, and before the motorman could bring it to a standstill the car struck the man and knocked him about 10 feet. The car is said to have been traveling at a fairly good rate of speed.

So far as known, Mr. Parker has no relatives in this city. The body was taken to Greenberg & Bond's funeral chapel.

FOSTER PARENTS WIN BABE FROM ITS MOTHER

Court Declares the Little Dyer Child, Stolen by Its Mother, Must Be Returned.

Tallapoosa, Ala., August 22.—(Special.)—The courts of Cleburne county, Alabama, have awarded the custody of the little Dyer child, which was kidnaped by its mother, to the foster parents.

When the child was a babe the mother gave it to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Starr. Some days ago the mother went to the Starr home, ostensibly on a friendly visit, and when she caught the child from under the watch of Mrs. Starr she took it and fled in a waiting buggy.

The courts decided that the child was legally adopted and that the mother had no right to its possession. However, no steps were taken in the kidnaping charge.

Huerta, Now Facing Crisis, May Reconsider Proposals

United States Will Continue to Insist on Huerta's Resignation and His Future Elimination From Mexican Politics.

Washington, August 22.—The Huerta administration in Mexico may reconsider its rejection of the American proposals to restore peace in Mexico and arrange a new basis for negotiations with the United States before next Tuesday. Strong intimations to this effect reached official Washington tonight, along with the information that the financial condition of the Huerta administration was such that a crisis was imminent.

Should the Huerta government decide to enter into a new basis of discussion, withdrawing its contentions as expressed in its Huerta note replying to the proposals communicated by Mr. Lind, President Wilson in all probability will not read his message to both houses of congress on Tuesday, as he intended.

No Move Until Tuesday.

The president made no effort today to prevent the house from adjourning until Tuesday. It had been supposed that he would read the message Monday and would ask the leaders in congress to arrange a joint session. Failure to send any word to the leaders was interpreted in official circles as meaning that the United States had practically given the Huerta government until Tuesday to make up its mind finally as to what it would do.

It is positively reiterated that the United States will continue to insist upon the resignation of provisional President Huerta, or an announcement of his intention to do so, as well as his elimination from the presidential race in the subsequent election.

Wilson Studies Notes.

President Wilson spent the day studying the notes exchanged by Lind and Huerta and preparing his message. White house officials announced that no copies of the document would be distributed in advance to the press, as has been the custom for years, as it was desirable to keep the document ahead of developments to the last minute. The message may be modified by dispatches received Tuesday, and there also is the possibility that the president may find it expedient to postpone delivery of the document.

Reports from Mr. Lind declare that his relations with the Huerta officials are more cordial than before and that the Huerta officials manifest a willingness to find some new ground for a settlement.

European diplomatic pressure, it is known here, is quietly at work in Mexico City in an effort to convince Huerta officials that the policy of the United States is being approved abroad. The failure of the Huerta government to obtain funds in Europe through the non-recognition of the United States is pointed to by the diplomats as likely to continue, pending a more respectful consideration of the American proposals.

It is learned also from authoritative

GIRL'S SHOCKING STORY SENDS FARMERS TO JAIL

Alleged "White Slavery" Case Stirs North Georgia—Girl Only 14 Years Old.

Rome, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—News reached Rome this afternoon of a shocking case of alleged white slavery, which has caused the arrest of George Walker and Will Walker, prominent farmers of Walker county, who are now in jail in Lafayette under indictment for kidnaping and awaiting trial in Walker superior court next week. It is alleged that they lured from her home Susie Fricks, the pretty 14-year-old daughter of James Fricks, a neighbor, took her to George Walker's home, in the absence of his wife, where she spent the night, concealed her the next day from her parents and put her on a train bound for Alabama City, Ala., where George Walker, it is said, promised to join her.

The child attracted the attention of the railroad conductor, who persuaded her to return home. She had $13 in her possession, which she said George Walker had given her. She is said to be unusually attractive and intelligent. She left a note for her mother bidding goodby and stating that she was to be married at an early date and that she and her husband expected to go to Oklahoma. In her note she promised her mother to "be a good girl and say my prayers every night before I go to bed."

The parents of the little girl were alarmed at her absence and made a careful search for her, but were unable to locate her. Will Walker is accused of being an accessory. George Walker, the alleged instigator of the crime, is a married man, his wife being a daughter of T. J. Bandy, a wealthy citizen of Walker county.

Solicitor General W. H. Ennis states that he expects to call the attention of the United States authorities to this matter and have Walker prosecuted under the white slave act, inasmuch as he sent the child into another state, Alabama.

The affair has caused much excitement and indignation in Walker county and it is expected that prompt action will be taken at the court term next week.

BOYS CLAIM MINISTER TOOK THEM TO RESORT

St. Louis, August 22.—Rev. John G. Brodt, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church, was arrested here today on the charges of five boys ranging in age from 15 to 17 that he bought beer for them and took them to a disorderly resort. Two of the boys were taken to the office of the circuit attorney to testify against the preacher.

According to the police, the preacher confessed that he bought beer for the boys and that he accompanied them to the resort. He said that he had been inveigled into the escapade.

Rosser Makes Great Speech for the Defense;

Scores Detectives and Criticizes the Solicitor

In a quiet and yet concentrated tone Attorney Luther Rosser Friday morning at 9 o'clock made the final plea of the defense for the life of Leo Frank.

The beginning of the speech was impressive, it was almost whispered at times, but the voice that delivered it rose above the hoarz of oznators and electric fans and seemed to carry a holy message about it. The life of a man was at stake and the message pleading for his life, was spoken almost as a prayer—the subject being dat.

Later on Mr. Rosser was more vigorous in both his approach to the question at issue, he branched from the quiet, sweet tones and dealt with the harsh features of the case, he told a joke, only one that probably no other lawyer would have dared have told in the court house and talked in plain words—facts.

Gentlemen, of all things come on, all things begin in a quiet tone, and he leaned over the railing of the jury box as he said it, seemed not to address any one of the jurymen.

"With this case, this has got beyond the speakers and beyond the court house. I sometimes wish it had ended with me making Mr. Conditt's sign that I can say no but little, my voice is hardly strong enough to go on.

"But for my interest in this case and my profession, I would not undertake to speak at all.

I want to repeat what my friend, Arnold, said so nicely. He said this jury is no mob. The attitude of the jurors I said is not that of the mob on the streets. Mr. Frank, himself must have brought that to mind with him when he came to Atlanta.

We all must look at this case carefully and we must not frighten and do not excite them, we are to be unprejudiced in our verdicts, men interested in their business should not wander in fields because of fruits of reverence, we may touch no harm to the grass that is on the ground as we here ourselves. Not with hands as when we walk the streets.

Defines Duty of Jury.

"Men, gentlemen of Atlanta, you are set aside; you ceased when you took your jurors oath to be one of the following men of the streets, you were duly sworn by your oath.

"So it is with the people, set apart; you care not for the matter and laughter of the public, and are unprejudiced and if you find a verdict on a man's life with no passion and no cruelty, but as men purged by an oath from the careless people of the streets. You are to decide from the evidence, with no fear of a hostile mob and no thought of favor to anyone.

"What suggestion comes into a man's mind when he thinks of a crime like this? And what crime could be more horrible than this one? What punishment too great for the brute in human form who committed it and who excited this community to a high pitch?

Mr. Rosser then launched forth into a description of the horrible crime perpetrated in the factory basement and of the sweet young girl

"Since 1898 the National Pencil factory has employed hundreds of girls and women and also of men, and not all of the girls and women, not all of the men have been perfect," he continued, "but you can find good men and women in all strata of life, and yet the detectives working with microscopes and with the aid of my friend Dorsey, excited almost beyond peradventure, found only two to swear against Frank.

Decries Dalton and Conley.

"They found Dalton and they found Conley. Well, I'll take up Conley at a more fitting time, but Dalton, who is Dalton?

"God Almighty writes on a man's face and he don't always write a pretty hand, but he writes a legible hand. You see Dalton you put your hand on your pocketbook.

"When Dalton took the stand Mr. Arnold said he walks, he walks in fear of seeing his sweet countenance before, but Mr. Arnold leaned over and I whispered in his ear, 'There's a thief if there ever was one.'

"I smelt about him the odor of the chainsgang and I began to feel him out. I asked him if he had ever been away from home for any length of time, and he knew at once what I meant and he began to dodge and to wriggle, and before he left the stand I was sure he was a thief.

"Dalton was on, three times in Walton county and then in another county where he probably went to escape further trouble in Walton, he got into trouble again. It wasn't just the Kaby thing of a young man who falls once and tries to get over it, but it was the petty thievery of a man at heart a thief.

"Of course, Dalton comes here to Atlanta and reforms. Yes, he joined the Godly conference and he persuaded them that he had quit his evil ways. That's an old trick of thieves and thieves. It to help their trade along.

"I believe in the power of the power regeneration; I believe that you can reform, that there's always time to turn from hell and I know it, but such a kind of man whom I don't believe can ever reform. Once a thief, always a thief.

"Your Master knew it. He recognized the qualities of a thief. You remember when they crucified Him and He hung on the cross by the side of the Well, He had a thief hanging beside Him and He said to that thief, 'This day thou shalt be with Me in Paradise.'

"He didn't dare say 'tomorrow,' He knew He'd have to wait today, because by tomorrow that thief would be stealing again in Jerusalem.

Dalton a Disgrace to His Race.

"Dalton is a disgrace to the white race and he was a thief and worse if there can be, and yet he joins the church, joins the Godly conference, he's now a decent, believable man. Well, you remember how brazenly he sat here on the stand and brazenly of his fall, how he gloated over his vice.

"He was asked if he ever went to that miserable, dirty factory basement with a woman for immoral purposes and he was quick to answer, 'Never.'

"Gentlemen, it was the first time Dalton had ever been in the limelight, it was the first time he, a poor, respectable white men and women had ever listened to him with respect, let alone attention.

"When he was asked about that, if he was guilty, if he had fallen, he might have declined to answer, then he'd have to admit his shame as any decent, respectable man would have done, but instead, he bragged and boasted of his vice.

"When Conley was asked what sort of a woman Frank had he brazenly and braggingly said he did not know, that he himself had such a peach there that he could not take his eyes off her to look at Frank's woman.

"Well, you have seen Dalton's peach, you all have seen Daisy.

Conley's Story Different.

"Conley tells a different story. He says Frank took the peach (that lemon) for himself and that Dalton had to get him another woman."

When Mr. Rosser referred to Daisy Hopkins as "that lemon" he made a face that caused even the tired jurors to smile and that almost convulsed the court room.

"I'm not saying that we are all free of passion, that we are all moral and perfect, but at least the decent man don't brag of having a peach.

"Well, if you believe Dalton's story, and let's presume it true now. If you believe it he went into that scuttle hole there at the factory with Daisy. Dalton took that woman into the factory, into a dirty, nasty, fetid hole where the slime oozed and where no decent man or cat would go and there he satisfied his passion. That's what he told us.

"Well, I thought I'd heard of partisanship before I came here. I thought I knew what the word meant, but I didn't. I never did until the solicitor-general, that you are to protect the innocent as well as to punish the guilty, was shocked in this court and then told the judge, 'I'll go as far as you'll let me.'

"I guess only the Infinite checked him outside of the court and as for his going any further here, well, I guess the Infinite had to stretch a little bit when they got going good.

"Dalton told us he went there about 2 o'clock one Saturday afternoon last year and of course, at that time the Clarke Wooden Ware company was closed down, and the next week the same entrance that the National Pencil company did, and Frank was working and knew nothing of Dalton's visit.

"Of course Dalton left an easy trail behind him, wherever he went he did that. You can still feel it in this court room.

Raps Four Detectives.

"Of course Dalton may have gone into the pencil factory that day and left his oozy, slimy trail there, but perhaps there's nothing against the factory, and you know the floor and the same entrance that the National Pencil company did, and Frank was working and knew nothing of Dalton's visit.

"Of course Dalton left an oozy trail behind him, wherever he went he did that. You can still feel it in this court room.

Raps Four Detectives.

"Of course Dalton may have gone into the pencil factory that day and left his oozy, slimy trail there, but perhaps there's nothing against the factory, and you know the floor and for our great quartet—Starnes and Campbell and Black (Oh, how I love Black's name) we want to put our arms around him whenever I think of him and Scott, for he was with that crowd, checking their every step to find something that would show that Frank was a vile hole.

"Well, I checked Scott and Darley and Quinn would be out of jail now if that place was what they claim it was, if it was a den of vice and infamy.

Mr. Rosser here entered into a eulogy of the character, life and morals of Mrs. Leo Frank, of Mr. Lemmie Quinn and Mrs. Quinn, of Mr. Campbell, the engineer of the factory and associates of Frank.

Defends Factory Conditions.

"I've got a better reason than any I've yet told, for declaring that conditions do not exist at the factory. You know, I know the working people of this state and this city. You people who work with head and it's never been my good fortune to be one of the working people, but there are no silken ladies in my ancestry, nor are there any silken men.

"I know the working men and the working women, because that blood runs in my veins. I live in Atlanta and I know them I do, and I tell you that there are no 10 working girls and women in Atlanta who could be got together in a room with as much filth as could shed stay there at that factory, with conditions that as they have been shown here, would not drive 10 good men here so thin blooded as to allow such conditions there.

Mr. Rosser then turned his attention to a discussion of Frank's statement to the jury, and declared that it was Frank's handiwork only and that neither he nor Arnold had anything to do with it, going to say when he got on the stand.

Look at the statement this man made to you, and it was his statement, not mine. I can prove that by the slimy trail there, he doesn't get brains enough to have made it, and Mr. Arnold (though he's got far more brains than me), he could not have made it. Mr. Arnold might have given it the same weight and thickness, but not the living fire of truth.

Frank's Character.

"Now another thing. We didn't have to put Frank's character up. If we hadn't, Judge would have told you Frank must be presumed to be a good character and that you did not have the right to ask that question about him, but we thought it was best and we put it up and see what a character the man has.

"There is not a man in the sound of my voice who could prove a better character. Of course, I mean from the credible evidence, not that stuff of Conley's and Dalton's.

"But you say, some people, some former employees swore he had a bad character. Well, I'll tell you about that later.

"You know that when you want to you can always get someone to swear against anybody, and those of us in public place and let my friend, Arnold, be foolish enough to put my character up against those of Dalton, those of have maybe hurt or offended as I have gone through life, who'd swear it was wrong against that little girl an ordinarily good character.

"Why you could bring twenty men here in Fulton county to swear that Judge Roan there on the bench has a bad character. You know that he's had to judge men and sometimes to be what they thought was severe on them, and he's naturally made men hate him and they'd gladly come and swear his character was bad.

"But if the men and women who live near him, the good and decent men and women who lived near him and knew, came in and said his character was good, you'd believe them, wouldn't you?

Misguided Little Girls.

"Well, gentlemen, the older I get the gentler I get and I wouldn't think or say anything wrong about those misleading little girls who swore Frank was a bad man. I guess they thought they were telling the truth.

"Well, did Miss Myrtle Griffin really think Frank a vicious man and yet work there three years with him? Don't you think she heard things against him after the crime was committed and that when she got up here and looked through the heated atmosphere of this trial she did not see the real truth?

"And Miss Maggie Griffin, she was there two months. I wonder what she could know about Frank in that time.

"There was Miss Dunnagin and Miss Johnson and another girl there about two months, and Nellie Potts, who never worked there at all, and Mary Wallace, there three days, and Estelle Wallace, there a week and Carrie Smith, who like Miss Cato worked there two years.

"These are the only ones in the hundreds who have worked there since 1908 who will say that Frank has a bad character. Why you could find more people to say that the Bishop of Atlanta has a bad character than have been brought against Frank.

"Well, you noticed they were not able to get any men to come from the factory and swear against Frank. Men are harder to wheedle than are little girls.

"Does anybody doubt that if that factory had been the bed of vice that they call it, that the long-legged Gantt would have known of it? They had Gantt on the stand twice, and well, you know Gantt was discharged from the factory, of course you weren't told why in plain words, but you all know why. Well, Frank is not liked by Gantt and Gantt would have loved to tell something against his former employer, but he couldn't!

Sums Up Character Charges.

"If they have any further suspicions against this man, they haven't given them, either they are afraid or are unable to prove their suspicions. If they have such suspicions, though, and are doing you a worse injustice.

"What are these suspicions that they have advanced thus far?

"Well, Miss Robinson is said to have said that she saw Frank touching Mary Phagan how to work. Dorsey reached for it on the instant, scenting something unsavory as is quite characteristic of him. But Miss Robinson denies it. There's nothing in it, absolutely nothing.

"Then they say he called her 'Mary.' Well what about it? What if he did? We all have bad memories. If you met me on the street say six months ago, can you recall right now whether you called me Luther or Rosser?

"The next is Willie Turner—poor little Willie! I have nothing against Willie, he seems to be a right clever sort of a boy. But just think of the methods the detectives used against him—think of the way they handled him, and then think of the way Dorsey treated him on the witness stand. He says—Willie does—that he saw Frank talking to Mary Phagan in the metal room. What does it show if he did see such a scene?

"I can't see for the life of me where it indicates any sign of lascivious lust.

Incident Was Public.

"Does what Willie Turner saw, talking for Frank's he saw it, show that Frank was planning to ruin little Mary Phagan? Does it uphold this point my friend Hooper had so much to say about?

"Even with that—considering Willie Turner did see such a thing, there's one fact that takes the sting out of it. He saw it in broad daylight. Frank was with the little girl right in front of Lemmie Quinn's office in an open factory, where there were a lot of people and where the girls were quitting their work and getting ready to go home to dinner.

"It wasn't so, though, and Frank never made any improper advances to this little girl. Let me tell you why. Mary Phagan was a good girl, as pure as God makes them and as innocent. She was all that, and more. But, she would have known a lascivious advance or an ogling eye the minute she saw it, and the minute this man made any sort of a move to her, she would have fled instantly to home to tell this good father and mother of hers.

"Then next, they bring Hallie Hewell, who says she saw Frank with his hand on Mary's shoulder. That's all right, but there is Grace Hix and Helen Ferguson and Magnolia Kennedy to contradict her and say Frank never knew Mary Phagan. You can say all you please about such as that, but there is one fact that stands out indisputable, that little girl had ever received mistreatment at the pencil factory, no deer would have bounded more quickly from the brush at the bay of the hounds than would have fled home to tell her father and mother.

Laughs at Hooper's "Pot."

"Now, my friend from the Wiregrass says Gantt was a victim of his 'plot' by Frank against Mary Phagan. I don't doubt that this 'plot' has been framed in the hearing of every detective in the sound of my voice. Hooper says Frank plotted to get the girl there on the Saturday she was killed—says he plotted with Jim Conley. Jim says Frank told him at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon to return on the next morning. How could Frank have known she was coming back Saturday. He couldn't have known. He's no seer, no mind-reader, although he's a mighty bright man.

"It is true that some of the pay envelopes were left over on Friday, but he didn't know whose they were. Helen Ferguson says that on Friday she asked for Mary Phagan's pay and that Frank refused to give it to her, saying Mary would come next day and get it herself. Magnolia Kennedy swears to the contrary. You have one or the other to believe.

"Consider, though, that this be true! How would Frank know who would be in the factory when Mary Phagan came? How did he know she was coming Saturday? Some envelopes went over to Monday and Tuesday. How would he know whether she would come on Saturday or either of these latter days?

"Now, what else have they put up against this man?

Says Nervousness Was Natural.

"They say he was nervous. We admit he was. Black says it, Darley says it, Sig Montag says it—others say it! The handsome Mr. Darley was nervous and our friend Schiff was nervous. Why not hang them if you're hanging men for nervousness! Isaac Haas—old man Isaac—openly admits he was nervous. The girls—why don't you hang them, for they were nervous in the factory—all of whom were so nervous they couldn't work on the following day!

"If you had seen this little child, crushed, mangled, mutilated, with the sawdust crumbled in her eyes and her throat protruding up from that stinking, smelling basement, you'd have been nervous, too, every mother's son of you. Gentlemen, I don't profess to be chicken-hearted, I can see grown men hurt and suffering and I can stand a lot of things without growing hysterical, but I never walked along there and saw the pitiful cry of a girl or woman without becoming nervous. God grant I will always be so.

"Frank looked at the mangled form and crushed virginity of Mary Phagan and his nerves fluttered. Hang him! Hang him!

Other Suspicious Circumstances.

"Another suspicious circumstance. He didn't wake up when they telephoned him that morning the body was found. Well, I don't know what he ate that night; it might depend on a lot of other things. Some of us wake with the birds, while others slumber along through the morning call of the breakfast bell. Would you hang us for that?

"Then they say he hired a lawyer and they call that suspicious—mighty suspicious. They wouldn't have kicked if he had hired Rube Arnold, because Rube has a good character. But they hired me and they kicked and yelled 'suspicious' so loudly you could hear all the way from here to Jesup's city.

"I don't know that I had ever met Frank before that morning, but I had represented the pencil factory previously. And as to their employing me, it's this way:

"There's no telling what was floating around in John Black's head that morning. Frank had been lynched and there was no telling what was likely to happen to him. They were forced to do something in the interest of decency and justice, the state's worst suspicion is the fact that they employed me and Herbert Haas.

"Now, gentlemen, you know what there is in it. I have told you that twice on that Sunday he had been to police headquarters without counsel, without me. The detectives say they adopted new methods of getting him there and sent two detectives for him. Black had said he had been a friend of Frank, and that something was haunting by the eagle eye of dear old John.

Takes Shot at Chiefs.

"They took him to police station Monday—took him I say. The police idea was to handle the factor. He was under arrest, that's an undisputed fact. They had him at police station, Lanford in charge, and they let the crowd around doing nothing, letting Frank soak. Beavers, the handsome one, was doing the same.

"Frank made a call for friends or lawyer. He didn't call for anything. If he had known what he was up against, though, in the police department of Atlanta, he would have called for two lawyers—or even more.

"But old man Sig Montag, who has been here in Bonaparte's time, knew the police crowd and he knew their tactics. He was well on to their curves. He knew what danger there was to Frank. He called up Haas to see if they want to come to police station—he had a good reason.

"He went to police station and was refused permission to see Frank. Then I want you to get that in your mind. A citizen—not under arrest, as they say—talk without the privilege of seeing friends, relatives or counsel. That is a deplorable state of affairs. What happened?

"Haas went to the phone and called an older and more experienced head to battle with this police iniquity. Why shouldn't he? Dorsey sees in this harmless message a chance. He snaps at it like a mad dog at a little man—in his way. He'll be a better man, though, when he gets older and loses some of his present spirit and venom.

There are things he has done in this trial that will never be done again. Gentlemen, I assure you of that.

Why Detectives Were Employed.

"Did Frank do anything else suspicious? Yes. Two others, according to Hooper, from the Wiregrass, one of which was the employment of a detective agency to ferret out this horrible murder that had been committed in his factory building. Why? Under what circumstances?

"I'll tell you.

"Frank had been to police station and had given his statement. Haas was the man who telephoned me and who employed me—not Frank. I went to police headquarters and was very much unwelcomed. There was a frigid atmosphere as I walked in. I saw Frank for the first time in my life, I said. 'What's the matter, boys?' Somebody answered that Mr. Frank was under arrest. Black was there, Lanford was there. Neither took the pains to deny that he was under arrest.

"Somebody—I don't remember Mr. Frank to make a statement, and I advised him to go ahead and make it. When he went into the office, I followed. They said: 'We don't want you.' I replied that whether they wanted me or not I was there, anyhow. I and a good reason, too, for coming. I wanted to hear what he said so they couldn't distort his words.

"While we were in the room a peculiar thing happened. Frank exposed his person. There were no marks. I said that it was preposterous to think that a man could commit such a crime and not bear some marks. Lanford's face fell.

"Why didn't Lanford get on the stand and deny it? Was it because he didn't want to get into a loving conflict with me? Or did he want to keep from reopening the dark and nasty history of the factory stairs and the Monola Mystery that are hidden in the still darker recesses of police headquarters?

"Frank makes his statement and is released. He goes back to the pencil factory, assuming that suspicion has been diverted from him. He thinks of the terrible thing that has been committed in his plant. He telephones Sig Montag about hiring a detective agency to solve the crime. Sig advises him to do it.

A Horrible Situation.

"I don't believe there is any detective living who can consort with crooks and criminals and felons, scheme with them, mingle with them and spy on the homes of good people and had who can then exalt his character as a result. He absorbs some of the atmosphere and the traits. It is logical that he should. But, even at that they've got some good men in the detective and police department.

"Old Sig Montag said hire a detective and Frank hired the Pinkertons. Scott came and took Frank's statement and said:

"We're not in co-operation with the city police department.'

"Now, isn't that a horrible situation—going hand in glove with the police department? But, it's a fact. Just as soon as Scott left Frank, he walked down, arm in arm with John Black, to the nasty, smelly basement of the pencil factory.

"What did that mean?

"It meant a complete line-up with the police. It meant if the police turn you loose, I turn you loose. If the police hang you, I hang you!

"Gentlemen, take a look at this spectacle, if you can.

"Here is a Jewish boy from the north. He is unacquainted with the south. He came here alone and without friends and he stood alone. This murder happened in his place of business. He told the Pinkertons to find the man, trusting to them entirely, no matter where what they found might strike. He is defenseless and helpless. He knows his innocence and is willing to find the murderer.

"They try to place the murder on him. God all merciful and all powerful, look upon a scene like this!

"Anything else? Yes. Look at this.

The Time Slip Incident.

"I do not believe my friend who preceded me intended to do this.

"I refer to the incident about the time slip. I have to use harsh words here, but I don't want to. This seems to me the most unfortunate cut of all. They say that that time slip was planted. They say the shirt was planted. Gentlemen, is there any evidence of this? Let's see about this statement.

"Black and somebody else, I believe, went out to Newt's house on Tuesday morning and found the shirt planted.

in the bottom of a barrel. They brought the shirt back to the police station and Newt said the shirt was his.'

Dorsey objected to this, claiming that the evidence was not that Newt said the shirt was his.

"Oh, well," continued Rosser, "it is the evidence, but we will take his view of it. He says that it looked like Newt's shirt. Newt Lee had been hired by the factory for three weeks, yet they want you to believe that they found a shirt like the old man had and went out to his house and put it in a barrel.

"One thing is wrong. The newspapers and others, I am afraid, think this is a contest between lawyers. It is not. God forbid that I should let any such thing enter into this case when this boy's life is at stake.

Things Hard to Understand.

"There are several things I don't understand about this case, and never will.

"Why old man Lee didn't find the body sooner; why he found it lying on its face; how he saw it from a place he could not have seen it from.

"I was raised with niggers and know something about them. I do not know them as well as the police, perhaps, for they know them like no one else. But I know something about them.

"There must have been a nigger in the crime who knew about it before Newt or anyone else. I am afraid you don't know, Judge, he is one of the most remarkable niggers I ever saw and I wish I had his nerve. There were things you did to him (referring to the detectives) for which you will never be forgiven. You persecuted the old nigger and all you got was 'Fo' God I don't know.'

"I don't believe he killed her, but I believe he knows more than he told. One thing he said was about Gantt. He knew Gantt and believed he was there to do him dirt.

Newt Lee Jumped.

"But they say now that he jumped back. Suppose he did jump back. Look at the boy (referring to Frank.) If you put a gun in the hand of Mary Phagan in a room with him she could make him jump out of the window."

Here Rosser entered into a long eulogy on Frank and the Jewish people. Then he continued:

"Suddenly this boy stepped out in front of this man Gantt, and he jumped back. Dorsey would have done the same thing. Newt Lee would, John Conley would, and I would, as big as I am.

"Here is another suspicious thing. Newt Lee came to the factory at 4 o'clock, and Frank sent the old man away. It was suggested that he was afraid the nigger would find the body. Yet when he came back at 6, Frank let him stay at the factory when he knew that in 30 minutes if Newt was the one he must go to the basement where they say Frank knew the body was.

"They say he was laughing at his home. If he had known of the crime of which he would be accused, that laugh would have been the laugh of a maniac to be ended by the discovery of the body.

"Another suspicious thing. You know that he was in the factory, but it turns out that he was not the only one. If the corpse was found in the basement and he was the only one in the building, then there might be some basis. But he was in an office room and there were workmen upstairs.

"My little friend tried to dispute that. That wasn't all. Conley was also there, and it came out yesterday that there was also another nigger—a lighter nigger than Conley—there. What scoundrels in white skin were in the building and had opportunity to commit the crime, God only knows.

Conley of Lowest Type.

"The thing that arises in this case to fatigue my indignation is the men born of such parents should believe the statement of Conley against the statement of Frank.

"Who is Conley? Who was Conley

ROSSER MAKES GREAT SPEECH IN DEFENSE

as he used to be and as you have seen him? He was a dirty, filthy, black, drunken, lying nigger. Black knows that. Starnes knows that. Chief Beavers knows it.

"Black got all balled up in his statement. Scott meant to tell the truth. He might find a flea if he had a spy glass.

"I asked Scott if this nigger looked like this when they got him. He said, 'No.'

"You slicked him up, did you?' I asked.

"He said they did.'

"Who was it that made this dirty nigger comb up here looking as slick as a fingernail? Why didn't they let you see him as he was?

"I don't suppose Dorsey meant to do this thing unless he got greased up and forgot his raisin'. They shaved him, washed him and dressed him up.

"The only evidence you have, gentlemen, is the word of this Conley.

A Terrible Accusation.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said Attorney Rosser slipping his nose glasses on as the jury came in from the noon recess and took their seats in the box, "Gentlemen of the jury, the charge of moral perversion against a man is a terrible thing before men, but it is even more so when that man has a wife and mother to be affected by it.

"Starnes, even Haltom, did not make this against Frank. It was just Conley. Dalton, you remember, did not even hint that Frank was guilty of wrong-doing as far as he knew. There never was any proof of Frank's alleged moral perversion, unless you call Jim Conley proof.

Couldn't Find Witnesses.

"None of these niggers ever came up and said Conley was there and that they were with him. Starnes—and Starnes could find a needle in a haystack, but the Lord only knows what he'd do in a game—he could not find any of these niggers.

"Conley says he played games of dice down there, and Conley, oh, he calls himself not Jim, as you'd expect the ignorant negro to do, but he calls himself James and he never shot craps. That's the name of the dice.

"In Conley's old time days, I guess he was 'Jim' Conley and 'shot craps.' Oh, the day when some sinister man showed him better than that.

"Well, it does look like some nigger would have come up and told that he saw James or Peters stated that day or that he played games of dice with James in some drinking place. It looks like, if detectives could have got them, you know, if there is anything an Atlanta detective does know, it's a Peters street negro.

"Well, there was 'Snowball,' poor 'Snowball'; you reckon, he pointing to Frank, made the detectives suspect 'Snowball'?

"They don't have to be made to suspect anybody or anything, as Charlie Hill said one time when he was police editor, the Atlanta police are worse than a horsefly.

"Well, I don't guess anybody suspected 'Snowball' but they didn't work thrice, they brought him from foreign parts and he took 'Snowball' says Conley to the police station, sending him when he heard it, to wait for him, and 'Snowball's' not a plain African and if he could have passed the police he would have done it.

He Would 'Shine' or Leave Town.

"I 'd was a nigger," continued the speaker in an impressive town, "I'd jine the circus or I'd leave town.

"Well, I'm sorry for Conley, he'll melt under the wrath of Black and Starnes and Campbell.

"Then, there was that old negro dray man, old McCrary, the old peg-leg negro draymen, and thank God he was an old-timer, to de war nigger. You know Conley, wishing to add a few finishing trimmings to his lines, said that old McCrary sent him down in the basement that Saturday morning and when the old darkey was put on the stand he said simply, 'No, boss, I never sent him down that.'

"Well, everybody in town got up that Conley lied. He says he watched there one Saturday last year between 2 and 3 o'clock. Well, Schiff says he didn't and so does Dalton and Holloway, the latter guaranteed by the state, and the little office boys, nice looking little chaps from nice families, they don't say they didn't put out Conley and you strip the case to nothing.

"Did you hear the way Conley told his story? Have you ever heard an actor, who knew his Shakespearean plays, his 'Merchant of Venice' or his 'Hamlet.' He can tell a statement—but because she would not talk to suit Starnes and Campbell, and two white men, and shame to them, got 'er into it.

Where was Chief Beavers? What was he doing that he became a party to this crime? Beavers, who would execute the law. Beavers, the immaculate.

Starnes said he had to confer with Mr. Dorsey twice before he could get the wording right at the station house.

"Believe Frank was in the factory if you can at 1:30, throw aside all the respectability and swear by Conley. Well, I know the American jury is supreme, that it is the sovereign over lives, that sometimes you, an aggregation of emotion and prejudice, but you can't make it believe anything like this.

Neither prejudice, nor passion, wrought by monsters so vile they ought not to be in the courtroom, could make them believe it.

"Then, here's another point, they said that there was a certain man, named Minney, whom we called as a witness and put up with. Well, the only one we would have had for Minney was to contradict Conley, and as soon as Conley got on the stand he contradicted himself enough without our having to go to the trouble of calling on witnesses to do it. If we'd put Minney on the stand they'd have had a days row about his probity and what would have been the use—Conley said time and again that he had lied time and again.

Wants Only The Truth.

Gentlemen," continued Mr. Rosser, "I want only the straight truth here, and I've got to believe that the truth has to be watered and cultivated by these detectives and by seven visits of the solicitor general. I don't believe any man, no matter what his race, ought to be tried under such testimony. If I was raising sheep and feared for my lambs, I might get an old scrub yellow dog on it. I might do it in the daytime, but when things got quiet at night and I got to thinking I'd be ashamed of myself.

"You have been overly kind to me, gentlemen. True you have been up against a situation like that old Sol Russell used to describe when he would say, 'Well, I've lectured off and on for forty years, and the benches always stuck it out, but they was screwed to the floor.' You gentlemen have been practically in that fix, but I feel, nevertheless, that you have been peculiarly kind, and I thank you."

Here Mr. Rosser ended his five hours' speech.

Dorsey's Brilliant Address Attacking Leo Frank Is Stopped by Adjournment of Court Friday

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey began at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon the final argument in the Leo Frank case, and he told the jurors as he started that they would not respect him if he slurred things over in order to please even them.

"Your honor," he began, "I want to thank you for the many courtesies you have extended me and for the unlimited time you have given me in this argument, and, gentlemen of the jury, I want to commiserate with you on your situation, but as his honor has told you, this is an important case.

"It is important to society, to each and every one of you and of us, and I do not feel like slurring over any point of it. Although it would be convenient for you, I know you would not have me do it, and would not respect me if I did.

"A case that has consumed all this time and that is of this magnitude and importance can't be argued in a short time. The case is important, and, too, as the crime is hideous, the crime of a demoniac, and a crime that has demanded the most vigorous, honest, earnest and conscientious efforts of the detectives and of myself, must demand the same vigorous, honest and earnest and conscientious effort of the jury.

"The case is extraordinary because of the learned counsel pitted against another. Arnold and Rosser and Herbert Haas. It is extraordinary because of the defendant, it is extraordinary because of the manner in which it has been argued and the means and methods pursued by the defense.

"They have had two of the ablest lawyers in the country on this case, and I know, too, that Herbert Haas is an able lawyer.

"They have had Rosser, the rider of the winds and the stirrer of the storm, and Arnold (and I can say it because I love him), as mild a man as ever cut a throat or scuttled a ship.

Abuse Plentiful.

"They have abused me, they have abused the detective department, they have heaped the foulest calumny on us that the mother of the defendant was constrained to arise in their presence and denounce me as a dog.

"Well, there's an old saw, and it's true, that says, 'When did any thief ever feel the halter draw with any good opinion of the hawk' and, continued the solicitor, looking at the defendant, 'I don't want your approval. I don't seek it. I don't want you to put the stamp of your approval on me.

"Oh, prejudice and perjury. They say that is what this case is built on and they use that stereotyped phrase until it charges the mind to think about it. Don't let this purchased indignation disturb you. Oh, they ought to have been indignant; they were paid to play the part.

"Gentlemen, do you think the detectives and I were controlled by prejudice in this case. Would we, the sworn officers of the law, have sought to hang this man on account of his race and passed over the negro, Jim Conley.

"Was it prejudice when we arrested Gantt, when we arrested Lee? When we arrested others? No, the prejudice came when we arrested this man and never until he was arrested was there a cry of prejudice.

"Those gentlemen over there were disappointed when we did not pitch our case along that line, but not a word emanated from this side, showing any prejudice on our part, showing any feeling against Jew or Gentile.

"We would not have dared to come into this presence and ask the conviction of a man because he was a Gentile, a Jew or a negro. Oh, no two men ever had any greater pleasure shown on their faces than Mr. Arnold and Mr. Rosser when they started to question Kenley and began to get before the court something about prejudice against the Jew. They seized with avidity the suggestion that Frank was a Jew.

The Defense Responsible.

"Remember, they put it before the court and we did not, the word Jew never crossed our lips. I say that the race this man comes from is as good as ours, his forefathers were civilized and living in cities and following laws which ours were founded, at large in the forest and eating human flesh. I say his race is just as good as ours, but no better.

"I honor the race that produced Disraeli, the greatest of British statesmen, that produced Judah P. Benjamin, as great a lawyer as England or America ever saw. I honor the Strauss brothers. I roomed with one of his race at college, one of my brothers is of his race. I served on the board of trustees of Grady hospital with Mr. Hirsch, and I know others too many to count, but when Lieutenant Becker wished to make war with his enemies, he sought men of this man's race.

Then you will recall Lieutenant Hummel, the rascal lawyer, and Rosenthal, another scoundrel, and Schwartz, who killed a little girl in New York, and scores of others, and you will find that this great race is as amenable to the same laws as any others of the white race as has the black race been.

"They rise to heights sublime but they also sink to the lowest depths of degradation.

The Matter of "Reasonable Doubt."

"I want to read you something further on what my friend, Arnold, read to you about a 'reasonable doubt' and show you a little more than he would consent to show you," continued the solicitor, leaving the question of Frank's race.

"I want to tell you about this reasonable doubt, the thing that has caused text books and judges to hem and haw when they tried to define it, and that made one textwriter say that a man trying to define it would be himself tautology, despite himself, that he would go round in a circle and use the same words in trying to define it.

"This reasonable doubt proposition is as plain as the nose on your face and there is no use to get mixed up on it, you can just use plain common sense and find out what is a reasonable doubt.

Defines an Honest Doubt.

"You are not to doubt as jurors if you believe as men. There is the whole proposition. Such a doubt as would control your conduct in the highest duties of life is the sort of doubt I refer to.

"It is not such a doubt as would show that the defendant might possibly be innocent, but it must be a genuine doubt. It is not such a doubt as might release a friend. It must be an honest doubt. It must not be a fanciful doubt, not a doubt of a fanatic or a super-sensitive person, but a common-sense doubt."

All the while Dorsey was busy turning the pages of many ponderous volumes showing the authority upon which he made his definition of a reasonable doubt.

"Furthermore," he said, "a doubt need not always result in an acquittal. In that case all cases would result in acquittal. It must be such a doubt as to create a grave uncertainty. It is not a mere possible or imaginary doubt.

"This is the effective standard, because this 'reasonable doubt' phrase is indefinable. There words it is incapable of definition, but a comprehension of it comes instantaneously upon hearing the words.

"Conviction can be established as well upon circumstantial evidence as upon direct evidence. Eminent authority shows that in many cases circumstantial evidence is more certain than direct evidence.

"Conviction can be established better by a large number of witnesses giving circumstantial evidence and incidents pointing to guilt than by the testimony of a few witnesses who may have been eye-witnesses to the actual deed.

Both Kinds of Evidence.

"In this case we have both circumstantial evidence and admission. Hence, with reasonable doubt as a basis, the evidence shows such a consistency that a reasonable conclusion in all cases will prevail.

"This thing of a reasonable doubt originated long ago when the accused was not allowed to be represented by counsel to defend him. In time the reasonable doubt will drop out. Our people are getting better and better about this all the time. The state is handicapped in all sorts of ways by this reasonable doubt proposition, and has to more than prove a man's guilt often before a conviction can result.

"Let this fact take lodgment with you," said Dorsey, earnestly, as he leaned toward the jury and held aloft a convincing finger. "Gentlemen, you are yet but men. Circumstantial evidence is not the mysterious thing that it appears on the surface. It simply means this, that when you've got a thing, you've got it. Get a fact as a man and you have it as a juror. That's all."

No Fanciful Doubt.

"I know that you can get up an excuse of any kind which can be used to have heaped the calumny on us in the jury box. You must not acquit this man upon any fanciful or fanatical doubt. Your oath will not permit you to do it and I know you will not go back on your oath.

"You can't get at a verdict by mathematics, but you can get at it by a moral certainty.

"People sometimes say that they will not convict on circumstantial evidence. That is the merest bosh. Authorities show that circumstantial evidence is the strongest. People are reproving about this. Yet juries are often reluctant upon this point. But juries should not hesitate at lack of positive evidence. The almost unerring indication of circumstantial evidence should control. Otherwise society is exposed to freedom in the commission of all sorts of the most horrible crimes. Circumstances which would warrant a mere conjecture of guilt are not warranted as the basis for a conviction, but when the evidence is consistent with all the facts and the crime only a conviction can result."

At this point Mr. Dorsey took up the Durant case, relating to the murder of two girls in a church in San Francisco, which Arnold had referred to previously. Arnold at once scented the exciting attack which Dorsey intended to make upon his manner of presenting the details of the Durant case to the jury, and registered strenuous objection to certain correspondence which Dorsey proposed to make reference to. This correspondence consisted of a telegram received on Thursday from a person in San Francisco and a letter received some four months ago.

Judge Roan would not permit the use of these documents.

Dorsey Incites Arnold.

Arnold was bounding in the witness chair, and arose to his feet.

"I ask," he said, "why Dorsey wrote to San Francisco four months ago to find out about this case?"

Dorsey's reply was very arid dramatic. He arose and was standing in a crouching position in front of the jury box, addressed himself to 'the jurors.

"Because," I anticipated the use the defense would probably try to put this case to, and I informed myself so that I might not be misinformed."

Dorsey intimated that Arnold had misrepresented the facts in the case to the jury. The moment was tense. Immediately Arnold's face was a general ruddiness of excitement in the courtroom and Deputy Minor rapped for order. Dorsey called hoarsely for water.

Dorsey then read to the jury the entire case to show them where Arnold had, he alleged, gone wrong on the facts.

Jurors Show Interest.

The similarity in detail between the Durrant case and the Frank case was striking. When Dorsey began the tedious reading of the legal record the jury became listless and paid small attention to it, but when he had read a few paragraphs each juror was leaning over in his seat and taking in every detail of the case.

Dorsey read a graphic story of how W. H. T. Durrant upon circumstantial evidence was convicted of the murder of Blanche Lamont in Emanuel Baptist church in San Francisco.

The facts in the Frank case were vividly recalled to mind as Dorsey read of how the girl had been missing and was found lying dead in the church tower, of how the friends of Durrant, who was an ardent church worker, flocked to testify that his character was unreproachable, and how the defendant had sought to establish his innocence by an alibi.

Alibi the Final Resort.

Upon the last point Dorsey made the comment that "an alibi is the last resort of a guilty man." At the same time Dorsey emphasized the statement that the defendant was "interested in religious work."

He stressed the part telling of the nervousness of the defendant. He thought it a striking coincidence that Durrant should have called for bromo seltzer, while Frank wanted coffee. He dwelt upon the planted evidence of the girls returned jewelry in a newspaper with two names written upon it to divert suspicion.

Dorsey stated that Durrant's previous character, as showed by the testimony introduced, was even better than that of Leo M. Frank.

He pointed out that while Durrant committed the crime in 1895, he did not go to the gallows until 1898.

He also proceeded to show that contrary to being dissatisfied with the jury's decision in that case the people of San Francisco were entirely satisfied. He also said that instead of the body being refused burial by all the churches, as Arnold had said, it was cremated by the boy's mother to keep it from being turned over to the surgical department of a medical college. Dorsey declared that, contrary to Arnold's statement, no "minister dying later ever confessed to the crime of which Durrant was convicted.

Durrant a Guilty Man.

"That is all poppycock he's telling you," said Dorsey. There was never a guiltier man than Durrant and never a more satisfied community than that where the verdict of guilty was rendered."

"Arnold wouldn't mislead you, though," said Dorsey. "He was inaccurate in his statements. He is an honorable man."

"His honor wis instruc," continued Dorsey, "but first I want to say a few things. I would not mislead you. If you think this man is innocent acquit him. If you think he is guilty, put a rope around his neck. If he is guilty say so. I know that you will if you think so.

"Now the evidence about his good character is all right, but first let's prove that his character is good. The defense offered the witnesses testifying to his good character. We took the challenge. We believe we proved his character bad.

"But the law says that the proof of previous good character will not stand in the way of conviction if the evidence indicates guilt.

Is This Greatness?

"Mr. Arnold, in his threats of asking for a mistrial, stood up—this may be an attribute of a great lawyer, but I don't want to be great if this is what it takes—and said before he ever heard the testimony of our witnesses that the testimony was a pack of lies of cracked-brain fanatics. We put up about twenty good honest girls. The defense called them cracked-brain fanatics. If those are the words of greatness, I don't want greatness.

"I know this case. And I know the conscience that beats in the breasts of honest men. I submit that character or no character this evidence demands conviction. I am not so low that I would ask you to break this man's neck if I thought Jim Conley was guilty.

"I want to talk about these notes to the grand jury. The grand jury received notes from the outside trying to influence them in coming to their decision in the indictment of Conley. Owens said that Fleming wrote the notes."

Rosser objected to this. Judge Roan ruled for Rosser.

Will Never Indict Conley.

"I'll make it that Owens tried to instruct the grand jury, then," said Dorsey.

"Arnold also said so continued Dorsey, "that Jim Conley had never been indicted. No! And, what's more, he never will be! He is admitted accessory after the fact. You've got another solicitor general to get before you get an accusation against Jim Conley! I have my own conscience to keep, and I would not rest so well if I put a rope around the neck of Conley for the crime that Frank committed.

"Now, the law is that evidence rules in spite of good character, but we hold that his character isn't even good.

"In showing this we exercised the right of citing specific instances of bad character once, but on other occasions we saved Frank's wife and mother from the embarrassment. We simply put up witnesses showing that his character was bad.

"They could have asked specific questions on cross-examination if they

HUERTA'S UNWISE COURSE.

Victoriano Huerta, provisional president of Mexico, replying to President Wilson's peace proposals, demands recognition and makes a deliberate misrepresentation to gain his end. He declares the democratic administration is not supported by congress or the American people in withholding this recognition.

From all indications, nothing could be further from the real facts. The only voice raised for the recognition of this blood-thirsty tiger is that of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, whose resignation has been accepted by the administration. The subterfuge is too obvious to be very effective anywhere.

Congress is overwhelmingly back of the president in his efforts to bring about a peaceful solution of the difficulty.

No voice is raised on the floor of the senate in behalf of recognition for Huerta. If any recognition is accorded it should be to recognize the belligerency of the constitutionalist party, which is opposing Huerta.

Leaving aside those having a personal interest in the subject, nine-tenths of the senate wish to avoid war and hope the president's patient and skillful dealing with a delicate situation may yet bear fruit.

The republican press is as cordial as are republican senators in wishing that success may crown the president's resort to diplomatic methods.

"Armed intervention is the last thing this nation's wants," says The New York Sun. "It is a remedy out of all proportion to the necessities of the case. Huerta's recent ruse should prove the wisdom of holding up the administration's hand in a trying negotiation." Continuing, The Sun says:

"If we were dealing with a responsible government the case would be simple. If we were confronted with a national danger our course would be plain. But where we are trying to use a shaky structure to build up order in another country good counsel alone can save us from mistake.

War in Mexico would be bloody, costly, and long drawn out. It would force new issues upon this government, affecting many of the most vital theories on which it is founded.

A sound rebuke is due to Huerta, and if Latin-American pride will not permit acceptance of the friendly offices of another government, the United States might adopt the scheme of European powers and play one Mexican against another: Carranza against Huerta; northern Mexico against southern.

SINNING AGAINST THE SOIL.

Out in the northwest, at every public gathering of farmers, the subject of "mining" the land comes up for serious and lengthy discussion, and the practice is not only earnestly discouraged, it is vigorously condemned.

"Mining" the land means, primarily, digging out of the soil all the substance there is in it, without giving it anything in return. That is, cultivating the land regularly, every year, without fertilizing it.

A secondary meaning of "mining" the land is cultivating the same crop on it regularly, every year, either without fertilizing it, or without allowing it to improve its own condition by variation—diversity of crops. What President Williams of the Georgia Agricultural association had to say on this subject, at Cuthbert, recently, is worthy of the careful attention of every man in Georgia who gets a living for himself and his family out of the soil. An extended extract from his address is published elsewhere on this page.

Sterile or barren land is one of the penalties the sinner against the soil has to suffer, but there is another penalty, which occasionally comes to large sections of the country and which virtually amounts to capital punishment.

Take, for example, the Florida freeze in 1895. The agriculturists of that state had not "mined" their land in the sense of cultivating without fertilizing it. They had come to one crop—oranges—with practically no diversification, and when vast groves were frozen to the stump, old men lost the labor of a lifetime in a single night. Those who had the heart to try again, and others who had not lost faith, have since made comfortable livings there—some of them fortunes—from diversified crops.

There is more corn being raised in Georgia this year than ever before but, even now, suppose our cotton crop should fare as the corn crop in some parts of the west has done, would it not be a distressingly lean year for us?

The boll-weevil has played havoc with the cotton industry in some of our sister states. The picket line of the pest is within thirty miles of our borders.

The thing for us to do is to keep in mind that the boll-weevil does not attack corn, oats, and cattle. Let crops be so diversified that a band of insects cannot bankrupt us. Let us feed the land by proper fertilization and then further help it and ourselves by diversifying the crops.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Much is being said and written, nowadays, about fast living and high life. "The pace that kills," it is called.

In England alone in the last few years the increase in insanity has trebled the increase of population by birth, and much of this is attributed to fast living.

There is another pace, however, that is becoming alarmingly fatal in America, and especially in the older sections of our country. It is the pace of the family that leaves a comfortable country home to settle down in squalid city quarters.

It is understood, of course, that many men who have succeeded on a small scale in the country have come to the city and prospered. The city needs, must have, and is glad to get a share of the best brain and brawn from the country. At the same time there are men who succeed on a small scale in the country, but fail on a larger scale in the city. Occasionally there is one who fails in the country and succeeds in the city.

It is to be presumed that people who move from country homes to town do so because they believe they are bettering their condition. There are supposed to be better schools for the children; a clerkship lures the son from the field; society seems to offer something for the girls.

That city life has its conveniences and advantages no one would deny; but the advantages and the ever-increasing conveniences of rural life are not to be overlooked by those who desire the best things for their children and for themselves.

There is a natural feeling of independence, in the country, that must often be sacrificed when one moves to the city. The average man finds it more pleasant to superintend his own small affairs in the country than to become a bossed drudge in the city.

There are many parents in the city—especially those who have growing sons to rear—who would be willing to sacrifice a great deal to get away, even for a few years, from the restlessness and the irregular hours of city life.

The pace that hurts some may not hurt others. At the same time it is well worth while for every family that thinks of leaving the farm seriously to consider the question, "Is it worth while?"

A DOCTOR'S WARNING!

Since the unfortunate accident which cost the life of young Banker Walker, of Macon, by bichloride of mercury poisoning there has been an alarming increase in the number of persons seeking this means of ending their lives.

This warning has just been issued by Dr. J. M. Van Mater, of Denver, Colo., to "would-be suicides:"

"I should advise anyone seeking a flower-strewn path to the Great Beyond to leave bichloride of mercury alone. I can conceive of no more horrible death than from the effects of bichloride."

The great danger of accidental poisoning where bichloride and other deadly drugs are kept on hand makes pertinent a warning to housekeepers. Deadly poisons should be sold only in a special package so constructed that one might know it in the dark. Then poisons should only be kept in a place of their own, preferably inaccessible.

On the celebration of its first anniversary, The Athens Herald of the 20th inst. under the editorship of W. G. Gredig, publishes a strikingly attractive edition. Mr. Gredig went to Athens from Atlanta and during his first year's management of The Herald has shown what there is in him as a newspaper man. The paper has made good and the liberal patronage it has received shows that as the only afternoon paper in Athens it has the cordial support of the people of that enterprising city toward the development of which The Herald has contributed materially during the past year.

Wouldn't the country rejoice if the cutworm could get bugs on high prices?

Surely a vice president is worth $25,000 a year? A talkative one could double that on the chautauqua circuit.

The gatekeeper couldn't be made to say that Thaw was "lost in a cloud of gold-dust."

After all, what's one little old office between two governors?

Anyway, members of an adjourned legislature live to read their own obituaries.

Just From Georgia

By FRANK L. STANTON

"He Jes' Laid Low."

I.

'Fore he went to congress they told him to beware,
And "can" the idle music of the hot, hot air;
"When others are a-talkin', an makin' of a show,
Keep a-thinkin' an' a-thinkin' an' jes' lay low!"

II.

That's what they told him an' he done jes' as they said—
'Praid as all creation of a-losin' of his head;
An' when the fight wuz over, an' 'twuz gittin' time to go
They took his office from him kaze he jes' laid low!

No Room for Literature.

"No," said the landlord, to the applicant who said he was an author, "I can't accommodate you. I have no spare room, but the last author who occupied it ran all the other lodgers away. He walked the floor all night long for inspiration, as he explained, that kept the baby awake, and I had to join him in his walk, trying to quiet the baby—setting him used to the nightly tramping business. Result was, I lost my job from falling asleep in the daytime, and I've been in hard lines ever since. There's a house next door where several lunatics walk in their sleep, you might apply there."

* * * * *

Now they think that of life's troubles they have sure got heavy loads; holdin' up the auto-fellers—makin' 'em work the roads; can't escape by jumping fences, swimmin' rivers, and such schemes they must help the roads they run on and stop buildin' 'em in dreams.

A Rhyme of Farewell.

Editor E. B. Russell, of The Cedartown Standard, rhymes this farewell to the Georgia legislature:

"The legislature has adjourned—
Fifty days of pay well earned.
Passed a mighty lot of bills,
Took corporations by the gills—
Knocked new counties in our head,
But not so hard that they'll stay dead.
Did an awful lot of work—
Hearing speeches we would shirk.
Did so well we're glad to cry,
'Au revoir' and not 'Good-bye.'"

Some "Crooked."

Here is The Coffeyville Journal's description of a politician of that town:

"The Coffeyville Journal tells of a politician in that town who is so crooked that he could furnish all the material for a fairbow and have enough left over to hoop several barrels."

In Clover.

"If we are not exactly 'in clover,'" says The Adams Enterprise, "we are mighty close to it. One day last week we purchased a small farm on the long installment plan. Tuesday last we got our license as a local preacher, and got $2 cash for marrying a couple, and on the Wednesday following we made $3 by acting as referee in a prize fight between two prominent citizens who had been at loggerheads for some time past. The Lord make us thankful for all we receive!"

"The Burning Question."

Congress is like a vacation:
Green fields and pastures in view;
Still, "when the tariff is settled,
What will the candidates do?"

When the nerve-racking problem of money
Is plain as plain preaching to you,
And the poor man is back in the money,
What will the candidates do?

This forecast they'll not be forgiving:
Without any issue that's new
They'll all go to work for a living;
That's what we reckon they'll do!

Time's Revenges.

Evidently the editor of The Beaumont Journal has been "getting even" with some one. He says:

"Sometimes a fellow who has been cussing everybody else all his life is elected to office so that everybody can cuss him."

Wants the Law on Him.

A Georgia man, who says that he had to listen to a sermon two hours long, regrets that he can't get a warrant for the preacher "for taking a text."

The officeseeker without a grouch is journeying with such speed toward the heavenly shore a fiery chariot couldn't catch him.

"Washington offers $100,000 for Ty Cobb." That's enough to make a $75,000 president sit up.

Probable political "personal:" "One of the governors of New York was in our midst recently."

PRESIDENT WILLIAMS ON THE DANGERS OF SINGLE COTTON CROP

At the recent convention of the State Agricultural society at Cuthbert, President John T. Williams, of Jones county, who was unanimously re-elected for another term, made a striking address in urging agricultural diversification in Georgia and the south, admonishing the farmers against the error of a "cotton only" crop.

Along this line he said:

"It has been wisely said that fire is a good servant but a hard master. The same may well be said of cotton. We must be the masters and cotton our servants, or cotton will be our fiend and we the slaves. How shall we escape this bondage into which so many of our fellows have fallen? The answer may be found in one word. Diversify. With a soil and climate capable of producing any known plant, it is nothing less than a crime to confine our attention exclusively to one product, the market price of which is entirely beyond our control. If a South Carolina boy can raise 228 bushels of corn to an acre of land, surely a Georgia man can do the same, and 228 bushels of corn to an acre is far more profitable than a bale of cotton, or two bales from the same acre. A neighbor of mine makes $100 per acre on oats and peavine hay, and leaves his land in better condition than before. Why cannot we do the same or better. An Elberton county farmer made $1,200 on an acre of onions, and the demand is almost unlimited. A Brooks county man made $360 per acre on cucumbers, and as long as pickles are made, the demand will far exceed the supply. In my own county, a gentleman neighbor of mine planted three acres in alfalfa the first of November, 1912. The first of April he made the first cutting, 18 inches. The 26th of May, he cut 18 inches more. The 26th of June, he cut about 18 inches. On July 4th he made the fourth cutting, the first crop of silk. This hay was as fine as ever went in a man's barn. This man expects to get two more cuttings. It now stands 6 inches, and covers the ground entirely without a skip. This farmer says he is going to get rich in spite of himself.

"These illustrations could be multiplied almost indefinitely, of men who have found the way from the bondage of cotton to freedom of diversified farming. But these will suffice to point the way. Our deliverance will not come from multiplied organizations, nor from higher prices of cotton, nor from government aid, immigration, labor laws, or any of the fanciful schemes advocated by self-appointed leaders. Much less will it come through the medium of politics. It must come from a realization on our part that we have too long despised our birthright of opportunity and have sold it for the temporary pleasure of a crop that will bring money. Let every Georgia farmer have his pasture of alfalfa, bermuda, Carter, or the mixture best suited to his soil. Let him have surplus stock raising on that pasture to sell. Let him raise his foodstuffs for his family and his stock at home. Let him, by careful experiments, find the surplus crop best adapted to his soil and climate, and then he can raise cotton as his main money crop irrespective of Wall street or any other force or factor, for the buyer may fix the price the farmer will get the profit. Then and not till then will we be free. Then and only then will agriculture become a profession rather than a means of making a living, and then will the welcome cry of "Back to the farm" be heard with redoubled vigor from every full-worn city drudge, and then will our rural communities become the educational, social and religious centers that they ought to be and will be when we make them so. Then will Georgia's real glory begin!"

Mummies Make Paint.

(From The Tribune.)

In order to furnish the innumerable delicate tints of paint required by artists, manufacturers have nowadays to ransack the world. Even mummies have lately been called into use.

Mummies are usually preserved in the finest bitumen, and this ancient bitumen has, in the course of centuries, turned the mummies a leathery brown tint. It has been found that when the bitumen and the shreds of mummy are ground down by machinery, a beautiful brown pigment is the result—exactly the tint required for painting certain shades of brown hair.

Sepia is one of the commonest of artists' paints. It is a deep brown in color, and comes from a source equally strange. It is prepared from the black, inky fluid discharged by the cuttlefish to blind and baffle its enemies.

Prussian blue is prepared from horses' hoofs, and is made by fusing the hoofs with potassium carbonate.

Raw sienna is soil from near Sienna, in Italy. Burnt sienna, another common tint, is simply the same earth burnt.

The majority of pigments for making colors—that is, the dry powder—are obtained from minerals. But many pigments come from the animal kingdom. Cochineal, for example, comes from the dried bodies of insects. A kind of pitch is also used for certain pigments.

Drunk on Strawberries.

(Answers.)

Those who cannot resist the temptation of too many strawberries should not be surprised if they are attacked with "fruit drunkenness," for it is an extraordinary fact that the excessive eating of strawberries often results in many of the sensations connected with alcohol attacking the eater. These symptoms consist of giddiness, headache, blurred sight and occasionally double vision.

For strawberries contain far more acid than most of the other fruits in season at the same time, and this acid acts very quickly on the nervous system, especially in the case of stout and full-blooded people. Excessive rhubarb eating can also produce symptoms of intoxication, owing to the excess of oxalic acid which lurks in this fruit.

But this is only one of many ways in which symptoms of drunkenness can be developed apart from excess of alcohol. It is quite possible to become temporarily intoxicated by excess of emotion, whether it be sorrow, joy or music.

The explanation is that deep emotion deranges the nerve centers, which are thrown out of unison with each other, so that such actions as walking and talking become difficult. An invalid who lives on diet for some considerable time, and then suddenly has a huge meal, can quite easily get symptoms of drunkenness on a chop or steak.

Strong coffee on an empty stomach also produces results similar to alcohol, whilst the fumes of turpentine are very liable to render you light-headed. Recently six men were reduced to a rolling condition while unloading a cargo of this spirit from a barge at Bristol.

The World's Mysteries

WHEN WAS THE DATE OF THE CRUCIFIXION?

Like so many incidents in connection with the life of our Savior, from the time of his birth to the day of his crucifixion, burial and rising, authorities seem to differ considerably as to the exact date upon which the crucifixion took place. For many centuries the Biblical scholars figured on the date of the birth of Christ, and finally settled upon a definite year, which is at variance by four years with the date we count as the beginning of our Christian era.

These same scholars seem to be less able to arrive at the exact date of the death of our Savior. Recently one of the most learned of these scholars has taken all the information obtainable on the subject, and in an attempt to fix a date has come to the conclusion that the crucifixion occurred April 18, at noon, in the seventy-fourth Julian year, or the twenty-ninth year A. D.

His main reason for accepting this date is his computation of the position of the sun and moon. He has figured that the full moon occurred at 7.41, Jerusalem meantime, on the seventeenth of April, in the seventy-fourth Julian year. This was a Julian, or Sunday, and was the thirteenth day of the month, according to the Hebrew calendar.

It was a rule of the law among the Hebrews that the day began at sunset; hence the calendar of Callippus invariably called that day following the sunset immediately after full moon, the fourteenth day of the month and a Sunday (sun's day). Thus the full moon occurred at 7.41 a. m. of the seventeenth of April, a Julian year, and that on the calendar of Callippus was the thirteenth day of the moon, or the one before the fourteenth, and was a Hebrew Saturday.

The Hebrew Passover was always celebrated on the fourteenth day of the moon next following the solar ingress into the first degree of Aries, the vernal equinox, and it must always, by law, be celebrated on the fourteenth day of the moon, as shown in the calendar calculated by the priesthood.

In the Julian year in the sun entered Aries at 5.26 p. m., March 22, which was a Tuesday. The new moon following was at 1.19 p. m., April 2 a Saturday. The full moon, then, fell on the seventeenth at 7.41 a. m., shows Tertullian, the Latin historian, to have been correct in affirming that the Passover feast was on the eighteenth of the calendar of April.

Again this same authority says "Modern ecclesiastical authorities on chronology find it impossible to assume that Christ was born later than 4 B. C., and Tertullian clearly states the nativity occurred in the forty-first year of the Augustan monarchy and the twenty-eighth after the death of Cleopatra. Thus, Christ must have been thirty-three years old at the time of his crucifixion, for his ministry began the third year before his crucifixion.

The 18th of March, in the year 29 A. D., is the day that Christian tradition—whatever value, whether much or little, be ascribed to it—appears to point as the date of the crucifixion. The baptism has been tentatively placed in A. D. 26-27 the length of the ministry has been fixed, with some approach to certainty, at between two and three years, and this, too, would bring the resultant date for the crucifixion and the passover of A. D. 29.

The great trouble that has been experienced in the settling of this date is to know definitely which moon or month was reckoned each year as the moon or month of Nisan, and if it could be definitely decided exactly on what day that particular moon or month was reckoned as beginning it would be possible to tell in which of the years, 28-32 A. D years intervening between the authorities place the crucifixion. Nisan 14 fell on a Friday.

The difficulty with regard to the month is to know how the commencement of the Jewish year was fixed—in what year an extra month was intercalated before Nisan. If the Paschal full moon was, as in later Christian times, the first after the Spring equinox the difficulty would be reduced to the question on what day the equinox was reckoned. If, on the other hand, it was as in ancient Hebrew times, the first after the earliest ear was barley ripe, or would be ripe, it would have varied with the forwardness or backwardness of the season from year to year.

The difficulty as to the day is quite similarly, to know what precise relation the Jewish day of the Jewish month bore to the astronomical new moon. In later Christian times, the Paschal full moon, all months were reckoned to begin at the first sunset when the new moon was visible, which in the most favorable circumstances would be some hours, and in the most unfavorable three days later than the astronomical new moon. Direct material for answering the question when and how far astronomical calculations replaced simple observations on the phases of the Hebrew calendar is not forthcoming, and that is why Biblical scholars are unable to fix the date for the crucifixion beyond all question.

A Story of the Moment

The Famous Prose Poet

DOWN ON THE FARM.

"If I had a bunch of tainted money," said the melancholy boarder, "I'd buy a farm. The man who owns a farm ought to be happy."

"But he isn't," responded the star boarder. "I've known a multitude of honest old farmers in my time, and I never saw one without a grouch. Farmers are all soreheads. In saying this I am not pointing the finger of scorn, my dear Mrs. Jiggers. If I were a farmer I'd be a sorehead myself, and the sunny smile for which I am celebrated would be lost, stolen or strayed.

"I remember when my Uncle Absalom bought a farm and moved his family to the country. There never was a spirit more blithe. He was so full of optimism he looked as though it had been farmed into him. His face was tanned, his hair was gray, and his eyes were the saddest things I ever saw. After supper we sat out on the back porch and I asked him what had aged and embittered him to such an extent.

"He said it was worry, Mrs. Jiggers. He had been doing ground and lofty worrying until his soul was worn out. Agriculture and worry are inseparable. So many calamities threaten the farmer that he is always wondering where he's going to be hit next, and this wondering ruins his sleep and destroys his appetite and undermines his moral character and sends him to an early grave.

"My uncle planted a crop of corn and thought he wouldn't have anything to do but cultivate it and harvest it and pull down a lot of money in the fall. But when the corn had grown a few inches $7,638,759 chinchbugs climbed the fence and arrived in the field to hold a basket picnic. My uncle counted them as they arrived, and was quite sure about the number. By the time the chinchbugs were through the cutworms got busy. Perhaps, Mrs. Jiggers, the cutworms arrived first. So small did the corn seem in memory. At any rate, my uncle was nearly crazy with worry. He used to walk up and down that cornfield wringing his hands.

"When the corn was knee high a second cousin of Paul Revere came riding down the road on a real black horse, warning the farmers that the grasshoppers were coming, and for several days my uncle fought these animals, trying to keep them away from his sacred corn crop. It happened that they didn't do much damage at that place, but the mental anguish the unfortunate man underwent made him ten years older, and developed spavins on both his legs, and he has walked lame ever since.

"By the end of July the corn was as high as his shoulder, and he began to regain some confidence. But just then an oily tongued stranger arrived, pointing out that he ought to have hail insurance. That section of country was visited by the all-fired hailstorms anybody ever saw, he averred, and he quoted statistics showing that hail had done damage to the extent of $564,397 in that vicinity in three years. My uncle couldn't afford hail insurance, but he had another worry. Every time a cloud loomed up on the horizon he began to sweat blood. He used to get up twelve times every night to see if any hail clouds were obscuring the firmament.

"Then he learned that hot winds were imminent and he sat down and cried. The hot winds didn't come that year, but when my uncle was done worrying about it he was 150 years old. Finally he harvested half a crop and began feeding the corn to his hogs, and when they were about half fat he learned that hog cholera was headed his way. His wife and the hired men had to hold him down and pump water on him before he regained his self control. It was that way every year, Mrs. Jiggers, and when I saw my uncle he was a total loss. A few months later he took a scythe and ran amuck over the countryside, and they had to shoot him. When I think of his melancholy career I lose all ambition to be a farmer."

POLO

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

Polo is an ancient game which is played with great fury and eclat by eight men on horseback.

There are four men on each side in polo, and usually two or three under foot. The object of the game is to drive a large wooden ball between the goal posts with the aid of a long-handled mallet. To do this it is often necessary to travel over a large assortment of personal friends and polo ponies, but this is all in the game. Goals count one. Broken collar bones two and three hoof marks on an opponent count one point.

Polo was originally played in India, and for a long time was an English game, but in an evil moment some Americans were allowed to learn it. Because of this another English championship has passed over the Atlantic, and Englishmen come over to this country annually to take lessons in the art of steering a mumble-footed nag with one hand and nursing a hen-minded ball toward the goal with the other. The late polo games in New York were a great success, something over 60,000 people rising to yell cheerfully whenever an American rider got in front of an English officer and spoiled his aim by getting hit on the leg.

Polo is a very exciting game, but it never become popular with the masses except from a spectators' standpoint. This is because of its incidental expenses. Even the most durable polo pony only lasts a few rounds in a polo match, and the man who aspires to become a great player and to be photographed for the society papers under a jockey cap with his mallet over his shoulder has to buy enough ponies to operate a small circus. When the English term came over to America it brought a boatload of ponies with it. But it did not take many of them home. What it needs for next year is another half-million dollars' worth of ponies with larger carburetors and more responsive steering gear.

'Steering a nimble-footed nag with one hand and nursing a hen-minded ball toward the goal with the other."

In America ponies are not considered exciting enough for polo, and some players use automobiles instead. It is indeed an inspiring sight to see the plucky polo player extract the steering wheel from his watch-pocket after his machine has capsized, right his car and dash madly into the fray. Polo is more fun than parachute jumping.

Bettering American Live Stock.

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

By sending inspectors to South America to investigate methods employed in exporting fresh meat to this country, the department of agriculture has brought into prominence the fact that the meat supply of the United States is below the normal demand.

During the last two decades, as the population has increased, the meat supply has diminished, until now there is a shortage of approximately 30 per cent. If the decrease of meat supply continues in ratio to the increase of population, how to secure a larger foreign supply of fresh meat will become a pressing problem in this country.

For years the department has sought to interest people in growing live stock, in doing intensive farming on fewer acres, raising crops that will be fed to live stock in place of being marketed, and taking the profits off the live stock sold ready for market.

By tilling fewer acres, using scientific methods and growing all that is needed, the average farmer may have land left on which he can raise a limited number of head of live stock. That is what the department of agriculture is seeking to have done. It suggests that all scrub live stock be disposed of, that only the best bred stock be raised and that efforts be made to market premium stuff, thus securing fancy prices.

ANNIVERSARY CLUB WILL HAVE BANQUET TONIGHT

W. H. Burwell, Cyrus Brown, W. S. Witham and Clark Howell Will Address Members.

Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the house of representatives, Cyrus B. Brown, assistant commissioner of insurance for the state of Alabama; W. S. Witham, the well-known financier, philanthropist and farmer, and Clark Howell will be among the repakers at the annual banquet of the Southern States Life Insurance company to be held at the Hotel Ansley tonight.

This banquet is tendered the Anniversary Club of the Southern States Life Insurance company and brings to a close the sixth convention of this unique organization.

President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Southern States Life Insurance company, will introduce the speakers and will also present to the banqueters the officers of the Anniversary club, each of whom will deliver a brief toast. These speakers will be J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, president of the Anniversary club; J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, vice president, and G. J. McDowell, of South Carolina.

The opening session of this unique organization, composed of agents who have produced over $100,000 worth of paid for business in the twelve months ending June 30, was held Friday morning in the Hotel Ansley. President Moore delivered a brief address of welcome. Officers earn their office through the amount of business produced, the agent producing the most business being automatically elected president, the second largest producer, vice president and the leader in each state, state vice president.

J. C. Walden, Sr., of Alabama, was installed as president. J. R. Williams, of South Carolina, vice president; H. Clay Smith, vice president for Alabama; Thomas Peters, Jr., vice president for Georgia; B. B. Murray, vice president for Florida and G. J. McDowell, vice president for South Carolina.

W. S. McLeod read a paper on the "New Policy," and was followed by an address of Robert F. Moore, agency secretary, who was unanimously elected secretary of the club. A luncheon was tendered at the Capital City club. In the afternoon the club attended the baseball game and the theater Friday night.

The second and concluding session will take place this morning at 10:30 o'clock when a number of interesting papers will be read. Among them will be that of Harvey W. Laird, assistant to President Moore and former insurance commissioner of Alabama, on "The Company With a Good Name." J. E. McLaughlin, of Atlanta, will read a paper on "Systematic Following Up of Prospects."

The speakers on Friday were Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Samuel Barnett, Actuary E. M. Veatch, Frank E. Broadnax and then an experience meeting.

WOULDN'T LOCK HIM UP, SO HE SNATCHED PURSE FROM A LADY

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Unable to resist temptation any longer, Manuel Noah, the man who requested a patrolman to arrest him a few days ago because he could not find employment and did not want to steal, is allowed to have snatched a purse containing $35 from Mrs. E. D. Rogers, at Lincoln and Hundington streets, this afternoon.

Mrs. Rogers was walking along the street with the purse swinging in her hand, a little child was holding her by the other hand. Noah approached her from the rear, grabbed the purse and fled. Colored workmen employed on a building under construction, heard the lady scream and giving chase caught Noah.

When caught Noah did not have the purse. He is said to have thrown it away while running. An officer was summoned and placed Noah under arrest. He is now held at the barracks charged with robbery. He will be given a preliminary hearing before Recorder Schwara tomorrow morning.

SUPERSEDEAS ASKED IN L. & N. RATE CASE

Huntsville, Ala., August 23.—Judges D. D. Shelby, of the court of appeals, and W. L. Grubb, of the United States district court, are hearing argument on the application of the Louisville and Nashville railroad for a supersedeas to hold up the order of the Alabama railroad commission for a 2 1-2 cent passenger rate pending appeal to the United States supreme court.

Petition in Bankruptcy.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed with Deputy Clerk Beers, of the federal court, by Charles N. Nicolls, of Atlanta. The petitioner, a millright, admits liabilities amounting to $2,760 without any assets.

Silver Polish
25c, 50c and 75c

Many of the "silver polishes" on the market are mercurial in nature. While they act quickly in cleaning and polishing, the silver tarnishes directly after using.

Gases of various kinds blacken silver left exposed to the air. Silver kept in high places will tarnish more quickly than if kept nearer the floor.

Our silver polish restores brilliancy to gold, sterling silver, electroplate, etc. We have sold it continuously to satisfied customers for more than twenty years. Our polish is a paste, put up in round, screw-top bottles. We guarantee it to give entire satisfaction. Sold in three sizes, 25c, 50c and 75c. Delivered in city without extra charge.

KILLS NEGRO TO SAVE HER HUSBAND'S LIFE

Chatham County Couple Arrested as Result of Shooting at Meinhard.

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—In the defense of her husband, Mrs. Hattie Lucas shot and probably fatally wounded Smart Lloyd, colored, at Meinhard last night at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Lucas and her husband, B. F. Lucas, were arrested early this morning by Sheriff Meritt W. Dixon and Chief of County Police McGrath and brought to Savannah.

According to the county police, the shooting occurred while Mr. Lucas and the negro were engaged in a fight. They quarreled over $3. The negro is said to have made an attack upon Lucas. Mrs. Lucas came to the assistance of her husband with a revolver and shot the negro through the back. The bullet passed through the right side. Lloyd was brought to Savannah and placed in the Georgia infirmary.

TRAVELING SALESMAN FOR ATLANTA HOUSE ELECTED ORDINARY

Canton, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—In an exciting election held in Cherokee county today for an ordinary to succeed Judge W. J. Webb, resigned, to accept the postmastership at Canton, Hon. J. M. Satterfield was elected by a good majority.

The other candidate was Hon. F. M. Blackwell, who was strongly supported by Judge Webb and his election was urged as an indorsement of the Webb administration.

Mr. Satterfield has been a traveling salesman for John B. Daniel, of Atlanta, and is very popular in this section of the state.

PITCHES TEN GAMES IN TWELVE DAYS, WINNING EIGHT

Boston, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Boston cinched the amateur championship of Thomas county here today when they took both games from the fast Cooleeboy team. The first was one-sided, Boston winning 9 to 1 without extra effort. The second battle was more closely contested. Boston held the advantage all the way and the result was never in doubt. Kid Blanton pitched both games for Boston, making the tenth game he has pitched in twelve days, the last eight of which were victories. Boston will meet Monticello in a series next week.

RALPH COCHRAN WILL MAKE ADDRESS TODAY

Ralph O. Cochran, candidate to succeed United States Senator Hoke Smith, will deliver a political address at Clayton, in Rabun county, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Cochran left Atlanta for Clayton Friday night.

Dr. DuBose at First Methodist.

Rev. Horace M. DuBose, D.D., pastor of the First Methodist church, and family returned to the city Friday after spending a delightful vacation in the mountains at Buchanan, W. Va. Dr. DuBose will fill his pulpit at both the morning and evening services. Everybody has a cordial invitation to attend.

a bouquet of wild flowers sent him by an anonymous woman sympathizer. Over the pine table sprawled the remains of a hearty meal by jailer Bell. Thaw's appetite apparently is good, for only bits of food remained. "But I haven't had a thing to drink but water," he smiled.

Whitewashed walls encompass Thaw. An iron cot stands in the cell corner. He makes his toilet at an iron sink.

M. LaForce, the jailer, said tonight that his observations indicated Thaw "had spells." "Otherwise," he said, "but he has behaved fine."

Dr. Joseph E. Noel, the jail physician, who has examined Thaw daily, said this afternoon that he regarded him as sane. It was said the doctor had been watching Thaw's actions at the request of the dominion immigration authorities. Whether he submitted his finding to them formally he declined to say.

Exonerates Gatekeeper.

During his various moods today Thaw was reminded of the predicament in which his escape from Matteawan had placed Howard Barnum, the old gatekeeper, past whom he fled to freedom.

"That's too bad," said Thaw. "Barnum didn't know one thing about what I was going to do. He was a victim of circumstances. He is innocent and the charge against him should never have been made."

Thaw telegraphed instructions tonight to William Van Aimee, his attorney, at Newburgh, N. Y., to assist Barnum in any court procedure at Thaw's expense.

New York state officers waiting here for Thaw's release on habeas corpus and his seizure then by immigration authorities admitted tonight that they were at sea as to where he would be deported in that event.

"It doesn't make much difference," said Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney general from New York, "we have arranged to hasten extradition in either Vermont or New Hampshire. We'll get him sure. It doesn't matter where they send him so long as it is across the border. Once in the United States the road to Matteawan is practically clear. We have been in negotiations with officials in every state to which there is a probability of his being sent."

Jerome to Lead Fight.

Albany, N. Y., August 22.—William Travers Jerome, former district attorney of New York county, was appointed by Attorney General Carmody today a special deputy attorney general to represent the state in procuring the return of Harry K. Thaw to New York's jurisdiction. He was selected because of his familiarity with the Thaw case gained in the two murder trials and as special counsel in several of Thaw's attempts to establish his sanity.

It is not the present intention to send Mr. Jerome to Canada, but to employ his services in procuring the extradition of Thaw from any state to which he may be deported from Canada.

DORSEY'S ADDRESS ATTACKING FRANK

didn't believe that these witnesses were telling the truth. They could have brought out whether or not his character was good by specific instances from the witnesses, but mark you this—they didn't dare to do it! They dared not to do it!

Do They Know His as Well.

"You tell me of the testimony of the good people down on Washington street and at the orphans' home and Dr. Marx! Do they know his character like the little girls who have worked at the pencil factory, but are no longer connected with the pencil company and under its influence?

"The trouble has been too much sheennannazin' and not enough honest dealing. Do you believe that Starnes and Rosser, in whose veins flows the same blood as that of the attorney, could get little girls to come up here and testify through prejudice? I tell you it is impossible.

Jim Conley shot into that covey. If he didn't get 'em all, he flushed Daley and Dalton, at least.

"Now, gentlemen, if you are of good character and twenty witnesses were brought to testify that your character is bad, would you let your attorney sit without asking for specific instances? No, I know you wouldn't. Yet three able counsel let twenty girls tell you that Frank's character was bad and that his character for lasciviousness, which, uncontrolled and uncontrollable, led him to kill Mary Phagan, was bad, and never asked them how they knew.

"Even among their own witnesses there was a leak. Do you remember Miss Jackson? What business did this woman, the head of the pencil factory, have gazing in at the girls? Do you mean to tell me that that's a part of his business? He had the foreladies and Conley who could do this for him, didn't he?

What Was He Looking For.

"You heard the testimony of his going into the room with the girl. It may have been that he was looking to see if the coast was clear for this very purpose when he looked upon the girls dressing.

"Oh, me! In the room with Miss Carson! The judge wouldn't let me say how long they stayed in there, but he did let me show that they went in and came out. What the judge says is law, although I do not always understand!

"Would you say that Frank was looking for flitters then?

"Or, maybe this witness was just another one of Arnold's crack-brains!

"Arnold said that he was going to ask a question of every girl who worked on the fourth floor. He didn't ask Miss Kitchens, and there were others he didn't ask.

At this point the judge asked Dorsey if he had nearly completed his speech.

"Your honor, my time is unlimited," said Dorsey, "and as yet I have not touched the case."

The afternoon session was then adjourned.

EVERS CONSIDERS C. WEBB MURPHY THE JINX OF CUBS

New York, August 22.—John Evers, manager of the Chicago Nationals, considers Charles Murphy, his club-owner, to be a jinx.

"That's why I left Murphy in Chicago on the 'Q.' said Evers, "for we are anxious to finish in the second in the race. We won seven straight games in Boston and Philadelphia. We are not saying anything about the Giants, but we are going to keep on plugging until the end of the season."

MANY APPOINTMENTS AWAIT SLATON'S RETURN

When Governor Slaton returns from the west he will be confronted with a large number of appointments which will not be deferred much longer.

There will be five fourth Atlanta judgship, which the governor is expected to announce immediately on his return.

Then there is the game commissioner, in successorship to J. E. Mercer, whose term expires in October. There are a multitude of applicants for this position, and in his own self-defense, the governor will be compelled to make an appointment soon after he gets back from the west.

Two members of the Western and Atlantic commission are to be appointed by the governor. It is understood that he has already selected them for the place, but the announcement will not be made until his return.

There are also five members of the committee on the Home for Wayward Girls, two of whom shall be women, to be named.

DORSEY'S SPEECH ATTACKING FRANK

tion of the offender from the room.

But once on the street—that was another question—and no one could have restrained the enthusiasm of the spectators.

Case Goes to The Jury Today.

When court adjourned Friday at 5:30 o'clock Solicitor Dorsey had scarcely begun what will doubtless prove the longest speech of the Frank case. He gave the jury an intimation that his speech would be a long one, and said in explanation that it was necessary, much as he regretted the necessity. He will in all probability take all of this forenoon to conclude, and the case will scarcely reach the jury before the afternoon.

It may be that the verdict will not be reached before Sunday, in which event it is possible that Judge Roan will allow it to be read on that day on account of the public interest.

The day was marked by the completion of a remarkable speech, by Luther Rosser, who spoke for over four hours, beginning at 9 o'clock in the morning and concluding at 3:25 o'clock. It was the masterpiece of Mr. Rosser's career, and was characteristic of his peculiar style of oratory. He ranged from the bitterest sarcasm and abuse of the negro Conley, the detective department, Dalton and others to a sharp criticism of the solicitor, at times lapsing into humorous anecdote to drive home some point or painting a picture of pathos that caused tears to well in the eyes of all. He paid a splendid tribute to the jury—a tribute which justly deserves to become a classic. His satire at the expense of the Atlanta detective department was a gem in its way and brought mirth to the very men he was poking fun at.

There was not a point in the whole case on which he did not touch, and when he had concluded he fixed the guilt of Mary Phagan's murder on Jim Conley. Different altogether from the wonderful legal exposition of Mr. Arnold, Mr. Rosser's speech was fully as effective. He did not hesitate to use unlovely language when he thought the occasion demanded, and he called a spade a spade with brutal frankness.

During the delivery of his speech many ladies were in the audience—friends of Mrs. Frank, for the most part. They left as soon as he had concluded.

Dorsey Begins Wonderful Speech.

If the beginning of Solicitor Dorsey's speech is to be taken as any indication of its conclusion, he will have made an appeal for the conviction of Frank which will rank with the best efforts of counsel for the defense. There is every indication that he intends "to go the limit," both as to time and manner of attack. Early in his foreword Friday he made this fact plain.

Referring to the prejudice which has so often been spoken of by the defense, he said that the attorneys for the defense had had as much part in inflaming sentiment as any one else. He referred to the fact that the mind of the mother of the accused had been so poisoned that she had called him a dog.

"I care not for your good opinion," said he, turning to the attorneys for the defense. "If you put the stamp of approval on my conduct of this case I will know I have not measured up to my duty to my conscience and the state."

He referred to Luther Rosser as a "rider of the wind and a stirrer up of the storm." Of Reuben Arnold he spoke "as mild a mannered man as ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat."

He spoke at length of the attitude of Frank's friends in seeking the indictment of Jim Conley, and declared that the people of Fulton county would have to get another solicitor before it was done—that Conley had told all he knew, and there was nothing left for him to tell.

Tribute to The Jews.

Mr. Dorsey paid a tribute to the Jews, and mentioned Disraeli, Judah Benjamin, the Strauss brothers and others as exemplifying the best of the race. But he also called attention to the fact that the murderers of Rosenthal were Jews, and that Abe Hummel, Abe Reuf and Schwartz were Jews.

At this point, after dwelling at some length on the rule governing circumstantial evidence, he sprang the big surprise of the day.

In his speech of Thursday Mr. Arnold had referred to the Durant case in San Francisco as a horrible example of the injustice which circumstantial evidence sometimes does. Mr. Arnold had stated that Durant had been hung and that years afterward the real murderer had confessed.

Mr. Dorsey produced a telegram from the solicitor general of San Francisco denying that any such confession had been made. He was not allowed to read the telegram, but stated the fact.

He then read a report of this famous case, which in many essentials fits in with the theory of the state. During the reading of this case the jury strained forward with interest.

Toward the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Dorsey spoke of the difficulty which had prevented him from getting certain evidence before the jury.

Mr. Dorsey will begin speaking again at 9 o'clock this morning.

W. J. HARRIS TAKES UP GINNING STATISTICS

May Have Duplicate Report Sent to Secretary of Agriculture of Each Cotton State.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, D. C., August 22.—(Special.)—director of the Census William J. Harris is considering the advisability of having gin reporters of ginning statistics send a copy of their reports to the secretary of agriculture of each cotton growing state at the time he sends them to the census bureau. This was urged upon the director today by Representative Heflin, of Alabama, who also made an appeal for increased salaries for the reporters who are now requested to report stocks on cotton held in warehouses and factories.

One argument in favor of sending duplicate reports to state departments of agriculture was to prevent the figures in the reports being altered, as was done on one occasion at the instigation of cotton bears who planned a coup based on these falsified cotton ginning statistics. Mr. Heflin thought the states would be willing to pay something for this service.

SLATON LEAVES TODAY FOR COLORADO SPRINGS

Governor Slaton will leave this morning at 7 o'clock to attend the annual conference of governors at Colorado Springs. He will be attended by Mrs. Slaton and by Colonel Fred J. Paxon, chief of staff, and his bride.

The adjutant general, J. Van Holt Nash, is at Camp Perry, near Cleveland, Ohio, in attendance upon the annual international shooting contest. The governor will be gone for ten days. The adjutant general is not expected back for two weeks.

Fairbanks-Stamper.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stewart Fairbanks announce the marriage of their daughter, Frances Susan, and Mr. William Harrison Stamper, which took place on Thursday evening at home.

The attendants were Miss Ruby Herring and Mr. L. C. Hoover, and the ceremony was performed by the bride's brother-in-law, Rev. E. E. Cavalerl.

The house was artistically decorated and there was present a small wedding company.

For Miss Waddey.

Miss Edith Hudson was hostess at a matinee party Monday afternoon, in compliment to Miss Norma Waddey, of New York. Invited to meet Miss Waddey were Miss Mary Howard, Virginia Haugh, Marguerite Gause, Lyndall Haddon, Elsie Campbell, Ethel Powell, Esther Hodleman, May Howard and Edith Hudson.

Morgenstern-Brosseau.

Mrs. S. H. Morgenstern announces the marriage of her daughter, Tillie, and Mr. Isaac Irving Brosseau, of Chicago, Ill., on Sunday, August 17, Rabbi Louis Mark officiating. After an extended tour through the east and west, Mr. and Mrs. Brosseau will make their home in Chicago.

Churchwomen to Meet.

The churchwomen of Atlanta are planning for a notable week, among different devotional services the mission study classes this fall. The Jubilee Union, known as the Young Women's Auxiliary Workers, of which Mrs. H. M. Hurt is president, has secured the services of a distinguished leader of study classes, Dr. B. C. Millikin, of the Missionary Education movement, whose headquarters are in New York. He will be remembered as one of the brilliant speakers and leaders at the recent Presbyterian general assembly held in Atlanta. Dr. Millikin will arrive on September 13 for a week's work with missionary leaders in the city. There will be two classes daily, of two hours each, formed of students who will teach mission study classes after their normal course under Dr. Millikin, in the various churches of the city. The course will therefore be intensive and normal in every sense a training class.

Each class will have six sessions, and each class will probably be limited to twenty members. Those wishing to have the privilege of this course will communicate with their missionary leaders, or the chairman of the mission study class of the Jubilee union. The sessions will probably be held at St. Luke's church. Announcement will be made later as to the expense of the course, the hours of the classes and the limitation of the numbers.

Dr. Millikin will meet groups of Sunday school officers and teachers on the two Sunday afternoons that he is here for practical suggestions for missionary education in the Sunday schools.

There will be a meeting of the vice presidents of the denominations on Wednesday morning at half-past 10 at St. Luke's to perfect the details of the course. Dr. Millikin will be the guest of Mrs. Archbald Davis while here.

It is a matter of cordial congratulation that the church workers on mission lines in the city have planned for such systematic and efficient study, and consequent extension of their work for the Christian's conquest of the world.

ROSA WOODBERRY,
Chairman Mission Study of Jubilee Union.

Haskins-Watts.

The marriage is announced of Miss Mallelle Haskins and Mr. Syd Watts, at St. Paul's Methodist parsonage on August 21, Dr. Frazier officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Watts left for an extended trip north. They will be at home on Highland avenue after September 1.

Miss Pagett Entertains.

Miss Annie Lou Pagett was hostess last night at a delightful picnic party at East Lake, the occasion a compliment to her guest, Miss Carol Dean, of Gainesville, and to Miss Hixon, of Americus, the guest of Mrs. Russell Bridges.

The party numbered sixteen, and after enjoying a swim in the moonlight, supper was served them on the island.

To Visitors.

Miss Anneta Honour will entertain on Monday evening in compliment to her guest, Miss Nell Honour, of Greenville, S. C., and to Miss Gresham, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gresham. Mr. and Mrs. Gresham will entertain at heart dice Wednesday evening.

Miss Springer's Tea.

Miss Frances Springer was hostess of a large gathering of young women yesterday, the bright occasion a tea in compliment to Misses Annie Will Pearce and Irene Berry, of Columbus; Sarah Garland, of Griffin, and Ruth Small, of Macon.

Golden glow with growing ferns made effective decoration throughout the reception rooms, and in the dining room, yellow nasturtiums were the basis of a pretty color scheme in yellow. Punch was served by Miss Charlsie McLain and Miss Emma Jordan, and others assisting in entertaining were Miss Carrie Parrish, Miss Theodosia Andrews, Miss Louisa Floyd and Miss Ruth Paden.

In the evening Miss Springer entertained the receiving party at bridge, inviting to meet them Mr. Drayne Jenkins, Mr. Dean Paden, Mr. Louis Pearson, Mr. Frank Taylor, Mr. Will Franklin, Mr. Gordon Freeman, Mr. Joe Teague, Mr. Will Ware and Mr. Howard Parrish.

Matinee Party.

Miss Marie Ulmer entertained at a box party Thursday afternoon in compliment to Miss Mildred Pike, of Thomasville.

Invited to meet Miss Pike were Miss Christine Henderson, Mrs. Hal Morrison, Jr., and Mrs. William Walsh.

For Miss Pike.

Mrs. Hal Morrison, Jr., entertained the members of the Thursday afternoon Bridge club this week in honor of her guest, Miss Mildred Pike, of Thomasville.

Ferns and a profusion of golden rod decorated the apartments.

Mrs. Hart won the top score prize, a white and gold china plate.

Mrs. Gordon Massengale was given the consolation, a piece of hand embroidered lingerie, and the guest of honor was also given a dainty piece of hand embroidered lingerie.

Mrs. Morrison was gowned in pink embroidered crepe and Miss Pike's gown was blue embroidered chiffon over blue satin.

The guests included Miss Pike, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Reese, Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Paul Morrison, Mrs. Lincoln Morrison, Mrs. Warren Powell, Mrs. Roy Webb, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Carlock, Mrs. Gordon Massengale, Mrs. E. F. Childress, Mrs. Clyde Spinks, Mrs. Harry Baker, Mrs. William Walsh, Mrs. Joseph Nix, Mrs. Buckley of Macon, Mrs. Jack Porter, Mrs. Fred Jeter, Mrs. Judson, Mrs. Warlick, Mrs. Edgar Chambers, Mrs. Claude Sims, Mrs. Charles Collier, Misses Christine Melson, Rhea King, Marie Ulmer, Susie and Corinne Conyers.

INFORMATION ASKED ABOUT ALIEN COLONIES

Washington, August 22.—Representative Clark, of Florida, introduced a resolution today to direct Secretary of State Bryan to furnish the house information as to whether any European, Asiatic or other governments is seeking to colonize any portion of the western hemisphere, and if so, what the United States has done under the Monroe doctrine to prevent such a colonization.

Drowns in Gutter.

Newark, N. J., August 22.—Conrad Churchill, an aged man, fell in the gutter when running from a fire at the Farmers' Seed company store here today. As he lay helpless, face down, water poured upon the fire flowed out into the gutter and drowned him.

FIGHT ON FREE WOOL IS BEGUN IN SENATE

Wyoming Senator Predicts Ruin for Wool Growers and High Prices for Mutton.

Washington, August 22.—Stubborn opposition to free raw wool and the radical reductions in woolen manufactures proposed in the democratic tariff bill was conducted by republicans of the senate all day today and will be resumed tomorrow.

Senators Warren, of Wyoming, and Penrose, of Pennsylvania, addressed the senate for six hours, the former characterization the proposed bill as "tariff-for-politics-only instead of for revenue only" and the latter asserting that the woolen schedule as prepared by the majority was distinctly "against America and for Europe."

La Follette's Substitute.

In the midst of the day's discussion, Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, introduced the third minority substitute for the woolen schedule, the others having been proposed by Senators Penrose and Simmons. The wide divergence of minority views on the subject of wool demonstrated in this triumvirate of measures was pleasing to democratic leaders who confidently asserted that they did not need to talk because we have the votes.

Though an effort will be made by Chairman Simmons, of the finance committee, and other majority members to get a vote on the woolen schedule by tomorrow night, the vote may be prolonged until next week. Senators Smoot and La Follette planning to debate the measure at length.

Senator La Follette's proposal was distinguished chiefly by its rate of 15 per cent ad valorem on first grade raw wool, a rate originally suggested by democrats of the house ways and means committee before President Wilson insisted upon free raw wool. The La Follette measure also proposed that second grade raw wools be free and would provide ad valorem, instead of specific rates throughout, contrary to the recommendations of the tariff board and the views of his republican colleagues. Senators Root and Penrose.

Penrose Attacks Schedule.

"From the British standpoint," said Senator Penrose, "the democratic woolen schedule, 'this bill is almost too good to be believed. It actually carries many rates of duty much lower and more favorable to British interests than the New York importers representing the foreign manufacturers dared to ask for."

His own amendment Senator Penrose believed to be in accordance with the desires of the great majority of the American people for protection, while making considerable reductions from the existing law. "These are real and substantial reductions," he said, "but it is believed that the rates proposed will save wool growing and wool manufacturing from serious injury."

Senator Warren, in a lengthy analysis of the wool situation, declared that under the proposed law immense sums would be lost to the producers of wool without benefit to the consumer.

NEGRO CUTS HIS THROAT IN DANIELSVILLE JAIL

Danielsville, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Last night Lindsay Moon, colored, who is in jail here twice convicted of burning the barn of Dr. O. L. Deadwyler, at Carlton, one year ago, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. He committedly severed the windpipe and is unable to talk.

He wrote a note to his parents before committing the deed, denying guilt and saying it seemed everybody was down on him.

SAVANNAH MAN FACES EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—At the instance of the local representatives of a bonding company, George B. Smith, former manager of the Indian Refining companies' branch, in Birmingham, Ala., was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Milliken. He is now being held at the barracks for the Birmingham authorities charged with embezzlement.

Deputy sheriff Walter L. Metcalfe, of Jefferson county, Alabama, arrived in Savannah this morning, in response to notification by the police that Smith was under arrest. Unless other arrangements are made, Smith will be conveyed to Birmingham, leaving Savannah tomorrow.

Negro Hung at Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., August 22.—Frank Collier, a negro, was hanged in the county jail this morning for the murder of Morris Robinson, another negro, a little more than a year ago. The execution was without unusual incident. Collier will be given a big funeral from his mother's house on Sunday.

BRENAU COLLEGE CONSERVATORY

GAINESVILLE, GEORGIA (Fifty Miles from Atlanta)
In the Heart of the Old South; Alive with the Spirit of the New

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The course of study of Brenau has recently been revised in accordance with standards of foremost American universities and colleges. Hereafter the degree of A. B. will be the only degree granted. The requirements for admission to Freshman Class are fourteen units.

TWO-YEAR COURSES.

For the benefit of many girls who can remain in college only two years, courses are arranged so that diploma may be received and the title of Associate in Arts conferred at the end of two years after the high school. This is similar to the practice of the University of Chicago.

PREPARATORY COURSES.

Courses equivalent to the work of a first-class high school are offered, and provision is made to receive pupils as young as fourteen years of age.

MUSIC, ORATORY, ART, DOMESTIC SCIENCE.

These subjects are especially suited to the needs of the average woman, and may be offered at Brenau as electives for the A. B. degree. Diplomas in each of these subjects are also offered.

Brenau has no competitors in the South in these special courses, and the demand for teachers who are graduates of Brenau is far greater than can be supplied.

The next term begins September 11. Only a few places are still open.

NEW BOOK READY.

A beautiful new book, entitled "Brenau Girl," has just been published. It is sent free upon request.

Address:

H. J. PEARCE or T. J. SIMMONS, Presidents,

Elmer Brown had one of his bad days Friday. Slim Love was "right." The answer is plain. The Crackers are within two points of second place.

$7,000 Beauty Beaten—Early Game Today

EDITED BY
Dick Jemison

WHIFFS

Waging a Battle.

WELCHONCE, Bisland and Smith are waging a merry battle for the honor of driving in the most runs this season for the Crackers. Smith leads at present, with 82; Welchonce, second, with 78, and Bisland, third, with 67. Long is next, with 57. If Whitey Alperman was in the game he might be the leader, as he had driven in 80 runs when he was stricken with appendicitis.

Season Closes.

THE SECOND season of the Empire State league will come to a close next week with the Thomasville team the winner. Valdosta won the first season. The teams will meet in a post season series after the regular season ends. It is a coincidence that these two teams should be meeting each other in the final three games of the season.

Why Is It?

EVERY TIME the Billikens and the Crackers take their locked horns in a series this season, whether it has been in Montgomery or here, it has either rained, stormed or threatened. The last time the Billies were in Atlanta we had a fierce storm, the signs being blown down at the park. And the last time the Billies and Crackers tied up in Montgomery, which was a Sunday, there was a fierce wind storm over there. Wonder what they have done to the elements that they act so when they meet.

Why the Wonder?

SCRIBES around the circuit are wondering who got the $7,000 that it is reported was paid for Elmer Brown's ten big eight-hour days of the Montgomery Billikens. Why the wonder; it's as plain as the nose on a pretzel face. It requires no thinking and not got it—that is not all of it. St. Louis, to whom Elmer belonged, got the major portion of it. It is no doubtful if Montgomery got half. Syndicate baseball you say? Well, what are you going to do about it if it is?

Joe Should Worry.

NASHVILLE scribes continue to harp on the fact that Joe Agler hates himself. Well, to be perfectly frank, if we played first base as well as Agler does we'd be the same way. But we have failed to see any of this characteristic that the Nashville scribes speak of. It's just a case of sour grapes. They're jealous because there isn't a ball player on the Athletic who is good enough to have cause to "hate himself."

H-a-a-i-u-p

A NEW YORK sport scribe pulls the following: "Frank Newhouse, the umpire who smote Fred Merkle over the head with his mask, announces that he has purchased a new mask."

Runners-Up.

"THE ATLANTA club looks mighty good for second place now," says The Birmingham Ledger, "as it is gradually gaining on the Billiken club. With the Bills on the road for the next two weeks and the Crackers at home, it looks like a safe bet that the Atlanta bunch will be the runner-up in the 1913 race."

Here's a Joke.

TY COBB is going to manage the St. Louis Browns next season, goes a current report that is rapidly circulated throughout the East. It is such a good joke, that we refrain from commenting on it.

Has Come True.

FRANK CHANCE in an April number of a magazine picked the St. Louis Cardinals to finish last in the National League pennant race and he was made the butt of considerable ridicule. He gives his reasons now. I don't think much of the Cardinals. They have only two pitchers and the club lacks the spark of the winner. I thought Bresnahan got more out of them than he did. He didn't deserve they had in '09. He didn't deserve to finish fifth, so I anticipated their fall. It came, didn't it?"

Only Twenty-Two Men Faced Slim Love, Who Uses Brush On Billikens---E. Brown Wild

By Dick Jemison.

Bill Smith played a hunch at Poncey Friday afternoon. Said hunch came out just as he played it, and the Crackers won from the Billikens 3 to 0 in a game that was sawed off at the end of the seventh inning on account of rain.

Bill's hunch was the pitching of "Slim" Love. The skies were overcast and Bill figured that with the great speed the human office building possesses he would buffalo the hardest of the Billiken swatters.

How effective the hunch panned out is evidenced from the following: Only twenty-two men faced Love in the seven innings, or one more than the allotted twenty-one.

Four-Hit Shut-Out.

Four of them hit safely. One of these being an infield scratch. A fifth man got on as the result of an error. Manush threw one out trying to stretch a single into a two-bagger, Chapman pegged two out stealing and caught a third off of first.

With the exception of the seventh inning, when McDowell was left stranded at second after getting a scratch hit and being sacrificed over, the Billikens were three up and three down.

The long southpaw had everything in there on Friday, and Chapman kept him working the corners in great shape. He mixed his overhand drop with a side-arm slow ball that baffled the best of the Billikens. And he smiled throughout the battle, gaining more confidence as the game went along.

Elmer Brown, the Billiken's $7,000 beauty, twirled for the Billikens. Elmer was wild, was touched for hits when hits meant runs and chimned in with a couple of costly bobbles.

He never had a chance to win after he made a three-base throw trying to catch Long out at first base in the first inning, for Love got better all the time.

Brown is supposed to be at his best on a dark day. But, as related above, Bill Smith played a "dark day hunch" himself, and he got the best of it. The Crackers backed him up in fine style.

Catch Chapman Altogether.

By way of passing, if we are going to finish in second place, let's put our best foot forward. Let's catch Harry Chapman every day. This is not said in any discredit to Joe Dunn, but when a team has a catcher that is working as steadily and hitting as well as Chapman is, it pays to keep him in that old game every day.

The only chance that the Billikens had to score was in the fifth inning. Sloan led off with a single, and took second when Long let it get away from him. He advanced to third on Jantzen's out, but was thrown out at the plate when Knaupp hit to Smith. Knaupp was then out stealing.

The Crackers counted their first run in the first inning. After Agler had gone out, Long got a free ticket and when Brown threw to the end of the bleachers trying to catch him off first Rabbit came all the way home.

Brown hit Bisland in the ribs to start the fourth. Holland laid down such a beautiful bunt that he beat it out for a hit. Manush sacrificed them both up a bag and then Harry Chapman kicked in with his usual pinch hit, scoring both men and packing the game on ice.

A Merry-Go-Round.

It had been a pretty game up until this time, but in the seventh, the Billikens blew with a loud noise, and the Crackers got five runs before they finished tallying.

Chapman flied out, but Love got a free ticket. Then Agler singled and on Long's single, Love counted and Agler went to third. Welchonce hit to Brown, who threw wild to second to catch Long. Agler counting and Long reaching third. Smith drove Long home with a single, sending Welchonce to third. Smith got second on a balk by Brown. Bisland hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Welchonce, and Wallon tallied when Sloan dropped Holland's fly. Manush purposely bunted to Brown and out so as to be retired before the rain came.

Chicago, August 22.—Quick thinking, clever base running and three hits off Scott gave Philadelphia the second game of the series with Chicago 2 to 1. Murphy filed out to start the eighth. Oldring and Collins both singled, sending Oldring to second. Baker flied out and Oldring took third. Collins stole second and Weaver, taking Schalk's perfect throw, went to the ground with Collins safe on the base. Weaver, thinking Collins was out, rolled the ball toward the pitcher's box and Oldring darted home with the tying run. Mclnnis followed with a single and Collins scored.

DEBUTS TODAY

AL NIXON.

Speedy little outfielder, who has been recalled from Macon and will play right field today.

NIXON WILL PLAY IN RIGHT TODAY

Al Nixon, purchased by the Crackers this year from the Virginia league and then farmed to the Macon, Sally league, club, has been recalled from that club and will play right field against the Billikens in the game this afternoon.

Nixon succeeds the Cuban, Jacinto Calvo, who has been sent back to Clark Griffith. Calvo was badly hurt when Curly Brown hit him on the arm in Thursday's game, and he will probably not be able to play any more this season.

Nixon is a left-handed thrower and sticker, with a great arm, plenty of speed and, from the way he has been going with Macon, a reliable batter. In his final game for the Peaches yesterday, he got a double and a triple in four times up.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 8, Cubs 1.

New York, August 22.—New York made it two straight over Chicago today, winning the second game of the series by 8 to 1. Cheney was wild and ineffective in the third inning. Vaughn was not hit hard, but the champions bunched their three hits with his two passes for four runs. Tesreau was very wild, but the Chicago batsmen could not hit him with men on base.

Atlanta Athletic Club Golfers Play for Davis & Freeman Cup

The golfers of the Atlanta Athletic club will contest this afternoon for the handsome Davis and Freeman golf trophy, which has to be won three times to become the property of the winner.

This is the fifth season that it has been contested for. F. G. Byrd won the tournament in 1909 and 1910. W. B. Tichenor in 1911, and Hamilton Block in 1912. Mr. Byrd will not be in the tournament this year, but the other two winners will try for it the second time.

The qualifying round will be played this afternoon. Players will qualify from scratch and play in the first flight will be from scratch. In all the other flights, the club handicap will apply.

The first and second rounds of match play must be played by August 28, the semi-finals by August 30 and the finalf by August 31. The finals in the first flight will be 36 holes; 18 in all the others.

But two more tournaments remain after this one is contested, the club championship and the tournament for the T. A. Hammond trophy.

The invitation tournament had to be called off, owing to the condition of the fair greens. But the golf committee intends to hold this tournament later in the fall.

TENNIS CHAMP NEARING FINALS

Newport, R. I., August 22.—Showing a mastery of tennis technique such as has not heretofore exhibited on the casino courts, Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated William M. Chotzner today in straight sets at 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

This victory of the present champion in the sixth round of the thirty-third annual tournament of the United States National Lawn Tennis association eliminated one of McLoughlin's most formidable opponents and virtually assures him a place in the final and championship round next Tuesday.

McLoughlin Steady.

Before the attack of Clothier he was calm and invincible, always ready with smash or pass when opportunity presented. The game Clothier uncovered would have defeated almost any other player in the present contest.

McLoughlin's defeat of Clothier was far more decisive and impressive than that of last year, when he required four sets in order to eliminate the former Harvard athlete, yet it was the concensus of opinion among the tennis sports that Clothier's game was fully 15 per cent stronger than in 1912. On the same basis of comparison, McLoughlin was rated a third stronger than twelve months ago. All told, McLoughlin scored 97 points to Clothier's 41, while his uncerned points totalled 49 to Clothier's 67.

While the McLoughlin-Clothier match was on, six other players were battling for the right to enter the closing rounds.

Other Results.

Nat Niles earned a place in the semi-finals by defeating Leofold Bertram in straight sets. R. Norris Williams, second, won from B. C. Law in a similar manner.

In the lower half, J. R. Strachan eliminated E. H. Whitney. Strachan has been allotted the grandstand court tomorrow with Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, the winner of which match meets McLoughlin Monday, while Williams and W. M. Washburn will cross rackets for the right to face Niles in the other semi-finals.

The second championship of the present tournament was won today when G. C. Caner captured the United States interscholastic title by defeating Harry H. Weber in the final round of the schoolboy play. Caner, who won the Harvard tournament, easily defeated Weber, who represented the University of Chicago, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1.

WATER SPORTS DAY AT ATHLETIC CLUB

Today is water sports day at East Lake. The swimmers of the Atlanta Athletic club are planning a big day. The events are open to all club members and their lady friends.

A beautiful loving cup for the best all-around water man has been donated by Fred Hoyt. Al Doonon has donated a similar cup for the ladies' event. Medals will be given to the second best for both men and ladies. A bronze medal will be presented for the consolation race for men.

To qualify for the loving cups, all contestants must enter all swimming and diving events. Prizes will be awarded on points.

Here is the list of events in the order in which they will be run:

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

All the News of Real Estate and Building.

Actual work on the Walker street industrial development was started Friday when the work of tearing down the houses now standing on the right of way of the spur track which will extend through the rear of the Walker street property to Haynes street was begun.

The laying of these tracks, which will be used jointly by the Southern and the A., B. & A. railroads, will cost approximately $25,000. Steam shovels will begin the grading for the tracks Monday or Tuesday, and the work of laying them will be completed in a month or six weeks, it is thought.

The syndicate in charge of the work is figuring on building a number of structures on the Walker street frontage for wholesale and retail purposes and a number of the prominent merchants in the city are making plans to lease same.

One of the buildings which the syndicate is at present figuring on will be of concrete construction, three stories high, 300 feet long, and will cost approximately $125,000.

Central Baptist Plans.

Work on the new Central Baptist church, which is to be located at the corner of Cooper and Whitehall, will be started as soon as the present church property, corner of Forsyth and Garnett streets, is sold.

More than a year ago the church purchased the new parcel for $18,000. It is 102x150 feet, and the plans drawn up at that time called for a church house and a Sunday School house, with all modern institutional improvements, such as a swimming pool, bowling alley, kindergarten, etc. The structure alone will cost approximately $60,000.

The present property, Forsyth and Garnett, is being held for $60,000, and it is thought that this will be put through within the next few weeks. Fifty thousand dollars was offered for the property at two different times last year.

Big Deals Brewing.

Another evidence that the city boom is in progress is given by the announcement by a prominent realty firm that a big realty deal involving more than $100,000 will be put through within the next few days.

This is in regard to a certain centrally located piece of property, almost in the heart of the city, full particulars of which will be announced later.

Sale on Ponce de Leon.

A. N. Sharp has sold to Arthur S. Harris through the Robert A. Ryder Realty company a two-story, eight-room house at 524 Ponce de Leon avenue, on a lot 50x221, for a consideration of $11,000.

M. C. Kiser Agency Sale.

The M. C. Kiser Realty agency has sold for Keeley & Kelly, assisted by D. E. Echols, a six-room residence at 87 Highland view, for 65,000. The lot is 50x150 feet.

Sale Through E. L. Harling.

E. L. Harling has sold for D. H. Strause to John B. Richards a six-room cottage at 250 Glenwood avenue, on a lot 50x12g, for $3,300.

Mr. Harling has also sold for a Mr. Wilson to W. H. Outcault a vacant lot on Josephine street, 45x216 feet, for $1,000.

THREE-CORNERED RACE BEGINS IN NEW YORK

New York, August 22.—With Edward E. McCall's acceptance today of Tammany Hall's designation as its candidate for mayor, and John Purroy Mitchell, collector of the port, already picked to lead the fusionists, Mayor William J. Gaynor was placed in the list for re-election on an independent ticket by his friends this afternoon.

Announcement that Gaynor would run was made by Louis Goodman, president of the East Side Gaynor association, after Mr. Goodman had called on Mayor Gaynor at the city hall. Prior to Mr. Goodman's visit Mayor Gaynor issued a statement indicating his willingness to be a candidate.

Present plans of the association and two other organizations supporting Mayor Gaynor are to place the mayor at the head of the strongest ticket they can pick out without regard to organizations that may have indorsed his candidacy. Thus the independent ticket may be partly fusion, partly Tammany and partly new.

ATLANTA SEEKS VISIT FROM G. A. R. VETERANS

Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention bureau, is busy at work preparing a booklet entitled "Historic Atlanta," which will be issued soon, in an effort to bring a large delegation of the G. A. R. veterans to Atlanta in September. The forty-seventh annual encampment of these veterans will be held in Chattanooga in September. A number of Atlanta veterans will attend this encampment and a strong effort will be made to bring a goodly number of the 15,000 old soldier boys to the Gate City.

The W. A. Weatherby party of 100 from Boston have already been formed. Mr. Houser that they will visit the city immediately after the encampment and it is expected that several thousand more will come with them.

The office of the convention bureau was moved from its former location, 817 Empire building, to the chamber rooms on the fifth floor of the Empire Friday.

Mrs. Bessie Conley.

Mrs. Bessie Conley, aged 32 years, died at her residence, 70 Peeples street, Friday morning. The funeral will be held from the church of the Immaculate Conception at 4:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakland cemetery. She is survived by her husband, Benjamin Conley, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mitchell, and three brothers and four sisters.

CLAYTON REFUSES JUDGE SPEER'S REQUEST

ward, is a member of the bar of the United States court, but I have never given him an appointment of any sort; I have never filed a case for Mr. Hayward or the firm of Talley & Hayward, of which he was a member. I have so scrupulously avoided it that in doing so, and so carefully guarded my conduct towards the firm that Mr. Talley himself has assured me, since this investigation began, that the restrictions placed upon it by my carefulness caused its dissolution. I have more than once disqualified myself in cases when well informed lawyers thought that it was not necessary.

"I have will, I believe, be little proof that I am temperamentally unfit for the judicial station. It is true that I insist on order and decorum in the courtroom. That has assured me cases without the slightest severity, and in nearly twenty-nine years upon the bench I do not recall that I have imposed fines upon but two members of the bar. One was for a deliberate and premeditated insult to the judge in open court in a written speech carefully prepared by a Mr. A. A. Lawrence of Savannah, one of the counsel for the defense in the Greene and Gaynor case.

The men who have attempted to defame me in their statements made to Examiner Lewis were counsel for defendants in great cases of embezzlement, or represented predatory combinations prosecuted by the predecessors of the attorney general, where on the trial I had judicially added to accomplish the highest purposes of the department of justice, for the enforcement of our criminal laws. Reference to the Greene and Gaynor case, to Miller convicted for receiving rebates in the transportation of grain, which replaced the business of south Georgia and Florida under the control of one firm, and similar cases, will show this to be true. Responding to the advocacy of the department of justice I have aided in enforcing the law toward a class of powerful litigants who usually escape its penalties. I have thus made strong enemies, but for the first time in my long judicial life I find the department which I thus served in line with the enemies thus made by conscientious service to my country.

The charge of the examiner that I am temperamentally unfit for the judicial station can be overcome by a mass of testimony of my contemporaries, which will be presented when we be proud. That this defect has not been discovered heretofore is at least observable. That I am fitted for the judicial station and have made a good record as a man and a judge can be shown by the voluntary testimony of such men as Senator George F. Edmunds, for many years chairman of the senate judiciary committee, this late Senator George F. Hoar, whose last letter to me was one of congratulations for the "skillful manner in which I had conducted my very difficult and delicate duties"; the late senator Wm. D. Washburn, of Minnesota, by several statements of President Roosevelt, by such manly and distinguished men as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Federation of Labor, the Order of Railway Conductors, and like organizations.

The chambers of commerce, and municipal governments of the great cities of Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Athens (where I was born, young manhood), and many small towns of my native state, by every member of the Georgia bar and the bar of the business community there also, by the late Senator Joseph E. Brown, the earnest and unsolicited general presentments of five grand juries most recently in session in the respective divisions of the district, objecting to the project for its division, ministers of the Gospel, my co-workers in the cause of education, and especially the trustees and members of the faculty of Mercer university, our greatest Baptist college in the south, of whose law school I have been for twenty years the dean the testimonials from the justices of the late J. H. Estill, Evan P. Howell, Charles R. Pendleton and Pleasant A. Stovall, and the officers of the soldiers as Major Claudius B. Gillette, Judge Advocate General Barr, the late General W. G. Gordon and General James H. Wilson, General Joseph H. Lewis, once commanding the Orphan Brigade of heroic Kentuckians, and my early friend, John T. Glidden, commanding Company K, Fifth Kentucky regiment in that brigade; and by repeated tributes by members of the bar and chambers of commerce at successive anniversaries of my appointment to the bench. This is the sort of evidence as to my fitness for the judicial station, with which I can refute the opinion of Examiner Lewis and the few malignants he quotes, entitled by the attorney general to direct against me the gigantic secret powers of an executive department, without the knowledge of the victim, in the cruel and unjustifiable mistake into which he has been betrayed.

"The charge of limitation about large fees in bankruptcy cases, it is known that the administration of bankruptcy assets in my district is more economical than in other judicial districts in the country. An easy calculation from the figures given in the annual reports of the attorney general will demonstrate this to be true. My uniform practice is to have a judicial investigation on each application for fees. It must be made by petition. This is referred to a special master. He takes the evidence as to the magnitude of the services, the fidelity and the character of the services rendered. This is after due notice to the parties at interest. When his report comes in, due notice and service is given so that objections may be filed, and not until every party has the opportunity to be heard is the fee finally adjusted. While the cost of these hearings is small the practice has saved many thousands of dollars to the estates of bankrupts. It has been fully set out in the federal reporters. On each application a record is of file and the property of the fees can be thus determined. I say this much with regard to the charges against me by the examiner as reported in the newspapers.

Yet, how can I know what the charges really are? The investigation by the examiner has been secret, and unutterably one-sided partisan and prejudiced. Though urged to do so he has refused to call impartial witnesses of the highest character. Mr. E. W. Stetson, president of the Citizens National bank, of Macon, urged him to interview the foremost men in all avocations. Mr. Stetson tells me the examiner laughed at him. He openly avowed he was not investigating the complaints on their merits. I know enough, however, to declare that the country will be astounded when it ascertains the methods which have been practiced against a judge who has ever worked with solicitous lesire to make a record of patriotic and effective service, and who has never lost an opportunity to encourage a love for a reunified country. The testimony of hundreds of the graduates to whom I have taught constitutional law will prove this to be true.

I have been a member of congress, as a state, and a member of the ways and means committee in my second term. I served on that committee with such great men as Samuel J. Randall, William McMinley, W. D. Kelly, John A. Kasson and others of similar intellectual power. I was a member of the conference committee of the house and senate on the tariff bill of 1883, and since our report was adopted as the law my name will be found appended thereto. While I am from study and conviction a free trade tionist and understand our constitution as it was interpreted by Marshall and expounded by Webster, I have never been a partisan and I have not taken the slightest part in politics during the-ty-eight years I have been on the bench.

Frankly I have indulged an honest pride in my long service to my country. I have done my best. I am conscious of no wrong. There are thousands who will testify that I have kept my judicial ermine, and whatever my fate, I trust in God that the American people will be so awakened by the enormity of the wrong attempted against an American judge that those representatives of an outraged people will sweep from the statute books every vestige of that spy system whose merciless, arbitrary and secret operation can, without notice, transfo a citizen, clothed with the ermine, and lower the judges of America from the highest to the lowest place among the judges of earth.

I am, Mr. Chairman, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,
EMORY SPEER.
Judge.

ATTACK ON SYSTEM CAUSE OF CHARGES, SAYS SPEER

New York, August 22.—(Special.)—Federal Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, charged with official misconduct in papers filed with the house committee on judiciary, has sent the following personal message to the New York Times in reply to a request of the editor of that paper for a statement from him:

"Mr. Airy, Ga., August 21, 1913.

"To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Responding to your telegram asking for a statement regarding the charges laid before the house judiciary committee by the examiner for the department of justice, I am convinced that the original animating motive was a strong desire in certain quarters to get control of the judgeship, the duties of which I have performed for nearly twenty-nine years. I also think that the enormity of the wrong attempted against an American judge that those representatives of an outraged people will sweep from the statute books every vestige of that spy system whose merciless, arbitrary and secret operation can, without notice, transfo a citizen, clothed with the ermine, and lower the judges of America from the highest to the lowest place among the judges of earth.

"I am, Mr. Chairman, with great respect.

"Your obedient servant,
"EMORY SPEER.
"Judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Claims for the Southern District of Georgia."

YANCEY LOVELACE HURT IN FALL FROM A WALL

Yancey Lovelace, 7 years of age, nephew of John W. Rowland, deputy insurance commissioner of Georgia, is lying in a local sanitarium suffering from injuries received while playing on a fall from the high retaining wall around the Marlborough apartments, at the corner of Peachtree and Pine streets, Thursday afternoon.

The little fellow came from his home in Brewton, Ala., some days ago to pay a visit to relatives residing in the Marlborough. While playing about the wall the boy in some way lost his footing and plunged feet to the cement pavement below, alighting on his head. Attending physicians stated Friday that the boy stands a good chance for recovery.

DECEMBER 7 IS NAMED AS TUBERCULOSIS DAY

Churches, schools, labor unions, fraternal orders and other organizations to the number of 200,000 at least will be asked to join the anti-tuberculosis workers of the country in the observance of the Fourth National Tuberculosis day, which has been designated for December 7, according to announcement issued by the National association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis. This movement will be participated in by the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association, of which Hugh M. Willet is president.

The movement will be furthered throughout the country by more than 1,000 anti-tuberculosis societies working through the state organizations and the national association. Personal appeals will be made to clergymen, school principals and leaders of various organizations, asking them to set aside a definite time during the week preceding or the week following December 7 for a talk on tuberculosis. The tuberculosis day campaign will come this year during the Red Cross Christmas seal sale.

McCormick Seeks Release.

F. O. McCormick, of Philadelphia, who was taken into custody by Detective Joseph McClain on a pennsylvania warrant charging his release from the federal prison, is seeking freedom on a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Bell will hear the writ Saturday. Efforts are being made by Detective McClain to get an earlier hearing. McCormick was sentenced to serve a term in the federal prison on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with alleged fake lumber deals.

sources that the Huerta government is facing a mutinous army dissatisfied because no pay has been forthcoming for weeks.

It was apparent tonight that Washington officials expected word from Huerta before Tuesday and that unless it comes the notes will be proclaimed to the world through the president's message showing the efforts of the American government to *bring about peace along with sug*gestions for a definite line of procedure by the United States in the future.

White house officials, however, were confident that the situation would prove itself. They would not disclose upon what their optimism was based on, but it is believed that Senator Wm. Hall Tuley, Wood largely responsible for the confident feeling.

REPORTED THAT SITUATION IS NOW GREATLY IMPROVED

Mexico City, August 22.—Nine battles between federals and constitutionalists are reported to have taken place during the last twenty-four hours. All the *fights are recorded as federal victo*ries.

According to official reports, the military situation throughout the republic is greatly improved. The rebels are said to be generally disheartened and on the defensive in all quarters.

These official reports virtually are the only source of information on which news for local consumption is based. The other side of the story rarely reaches the capital because of interrupted communications and censorship of dispatches at points outside the capital. In three of the fights reported 175 rebels are said to have been killed, while the federal loss is given at eight.

The situation about Torreon is now admitted to be slightly worse. It is understood the rebels control much of the country about that section, and that about 1,000 more are marching southward from Cuatro Cienegas, Coahuila, to reinforce those already there.

FRIENDLESS NEGRO IS RESPITED BY GOVERNOR

That a friendless and penniless negro will have just as good a chance for a hearing as the defendant with money while John M. Slaton is governor was shown yesterday when the governor respited for thirty days a negro named Will Varner, under sentence of death for the killing of another negro in Newton county.

Varner's case has never been to the supreme court because he could not afford to employ a lawyer to carry it there. If the case could be taken to the supreme court, it would not be heard until November, which would give the prisoner a chance equite than he now has. He was sentenced to hang on August 29 and this sentence has been stayed until September 29.

The negro is a trapper. The man for whom he works appealed to the prison commission, asking for a hearing. As the next meeting of the prison commission is not until the first Monday in September, after the date set for the hanging, Chairman Davidson asked that the man be respited so that he might be given a hearing. It was on the request of Chairman Davidson that the governor took his action.

FIELD FORCE IS NAMED BY MARSHAL THOMPSON

Howard Thompson, United States marshal for the northern district of Georgia, yesterday announced his full field force of assistants, fourteen in all, and one of his office force, composed of three men.

So far Marshal Thompson has not named his chief deputy—that appointee being the direct personal representative of the federal marshal at all time, the marshal is absent from his desk.

Marshal Thompson retained L. B. Greer, for many years in the marshal's office, because of his thorough and complete knowledge of the workings of that governmental department. Of the two office appointees yet to be named one will be recorded as chief deputy to the marshal for the northern district.

Marshal Thompson's field force, as qualified Friday by making bond in the sum of $2,000 each, is composed of Frank Godfrey with headquarters at Clayton, Rabun county; H. B. Henderson, Bowersville, Franklin county; John W. Jones, Blairsville, Union county; H. M. Knight, Carrollton; B. B. Landers, Gainesville, who has been in government service the greater part of the time as deputy marshal since President Cleveland's first nomination; W. R. Lovingood, Blue Ridge; H. D. Miller, Athens; W. D. Owens, Columbus; J. H. Penland, Jasper, Pickens county; J. W. Satterfield, Dahlonega; W. A. Wardlaw, Rome; Lee Whatley, Atlanta; E. P. Wood, Hiawassee, Towns county; Thomas Curtis, Canton.

COTTON NERVOUS AND UNSETTLED

Reports of Better Weather in Southwest Caused a Sharp Break, But Market Later Recovered Part of the Loss.

New York, August 22.—The cotton market was extremely nervous and unsettled today, owing to reports of better weather in the southwest, but a sharp break, under heavy realizing, was followed by a less active business, and part of the loss was recovered, with the close steady at a net decline of 9 to 11 points.

Detailed weather reports showed no important precipitation in the southwest and continued high temperatures for the twenty-four hours ending this morning, but the official forecast confirmed private predictions of showers or unsettled conditions and many private wires were received reporting showers or rains at both Texas and Oklahoma points during the afternoon.

Liverpool was evidently influenced by the weather news and prices there were considerably lower than due.

The local market opened at a decline of 6 to 7 points in consequence and quickly broke to a loss of about 15 points on the active new crop months. The reaction proved sufficient to bring in quite a lot of buying orders, with a steadier tone marked only momentarily, in view of the improving weather news and after a rally of 8 to 7 points, prices again reared off to 12 December contracts selling at 11.38 or 14 to 15 points net lower. Another rally followed upon the reported weather reports and the market at one time sold at practically the closing figures of yesterday, but retained very much unsettled and declined again in the late trading, under private rain news, closing within 4 or 5 points of the lowest on the positions.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, August 22.—The cotton market was featured by nervous fluctuations today. While there was some disposition to be continued unsatisfactory weather in the west, reported by the government crop experts, it ment claimed that the short interest was to a great extent, covered and replaced a long interest, and the market was left to work forth private accounts of the crop. In the area the west, conditions were favorable and official weather news was to receive. The average temperature was favorable for the nervous price changes.

On the opening, the tone was steady and prices were 1 to 5 points higher, but the early rise was reports of rains in the west. The market then weakened sharply under a flood of selling in the western belt, which increased during and after the call the decline reaching a total of 10 points. On this decline, some trade in cotton was shown coming forward.

The official weather reports noted plenty of no rain in the west, and this together with bullish comments from the spot and crop bulletin report, led to buying by both a and after the middle of the day prices had to 5 points over yesterday's last quotations.

In the afternoon there was a moderate, but even, undertone during the trading, and the finally standing 9 to 11 points net lower. The final figures. The close was steady at a net decline of 1 to 3 points.

Spot cotton quiet and unchanged; middling 12 1-16, sales on the spot 104 bales; including none; to arrive 1,600 bales. Futures closed steady, 9½ nominal; good ordinary 11¾, nominal; good ordinary 11¾, low middling 11¾, strict good middling 12 9-16, middling 12 1-16, strict middling 12¾, good middling 12 5-16, strict low middling 12¾, middling fair 13, strict middling fair to fair 13 9-16, nominal. Receipts 691 bales.

Dry Goods.

New York, August 22.—Cotton goods markets remain very firm in the print cloth division, but trading for the day was low in volume, owing in an easing in cotton. Print cloths were steady with a broader demand noted for carded wools. The market for staple cotton goods is a crop shortage of 20 per cent, with demand for the rapid rise of the cotton market. An active trade is passing in silk piece goods for spot delivery.

Gibert & Clay.

New York, August 22.—Reports of light rains over north Texas and Oklahoma were followed by liquidation here this morning, and the prices about 15 points. At the lower level the market met with request and to-day it is very nearly the full extent of the early loss. This buying was based upon the idea that the rain-fall coming so late in Oklahoma could be of little help, while in Texas it was not heavy enough to stop deterioration.

BANKERS CONCILIATORY TOWARD CURRENCY BILL

Hope for Amendments to Owen-Glass Bill and Will Aid President Wilson in Work.

Chicago, August 22.—A spirit of conciliation and compromise toward the Owen-Glass currency bill as it is believed it will be amended was manifested at a conference of leading bankers from all parts of the country held here today. Before the conference adjourns tomorrow it is expected that resolutions recommending several important changes in the currency bill now pending in congress will be adopted and that the bankers will tender their influence to assist President Wilson in obtaining currency legislation.

The change in the attitude of the bankers developed after George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial bank, had addressed the meeting and told of the important conference he held in New York yesterday with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, at which amendments to the currency bill desired by the bankers were discussed and assurances given that the administration was willing to work along very reasonable lines to the measure.

Objections to Measure.

Mr. Reynolds was summoned to New York to confer with Secretary McAdoo last Wednesday to discuss the attitude of the bankers toward the proposed legislation. Mr. Reynolds outlined the bankers' principal objections to the measure.

In addressing the conference today Mr. Reynolds said:

"If we act wisely I believe we will be able to obtain material modifications in the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress.

"I spent yesterday with Secretary Meadoo in New York, and we talked about the bill and other matters, and he assured me the administration desired to do all it its power in removing any cause of which we have complained. Many objections to the original bill already have been made. Several important defects pointed out by us have been remedied, and I feel we can get other corrections if we go about it in a spirit of conciliation and compromise and evince a willingness to meet the government half way.

"I have had considerable contact with those in control of the bill in congress and I have found they are willing to listen and want to be fair. I predict that if we meet the government in the proper spirit a bill reasonably satisfactory to the bankers and business men may be passed at the present session.

"We probably will not be able to get everything we want, but I believe President Wilson can put through some sort of a bill, and I for one favor co-operating with him in securing the best measure that political exigencies will permit.

Reduce Number of Banks.

"I believe we can get the number of federal reserve banks reduced from twelve to five or six; that we can have changes made in the clause referring to the chairman of the federal reserve board which will remove it from politics, and that we can have the advisory committee of bankers clothed with the power of veto in connection with the management of the reserve banks."

Mr. Reynolds was vigorously applauded and a moment later the attitude of the bankers toward the new currency bill apparently had changed from opposition to willingness to compromise.

Other speakers urged the adoption of the same policy in discussing the measure.

James B. Forgen, of Chicago, opened the discussion by introducing a set of resolutions pointing out what he considered defects in the bill and advising that congress be asked not to pass any currency legislation at the present session, but defer action until a new bill had been drafted by a commission composed of representatives of the government, the bankers and business men of all classes appointed by the national chamber of commerce.

Referred to Committee.

The resolutions were read and after discussion were referred to the committee on resolutions. The committee will submit its report to the conference tomorrow. The following committee on resolutions was appointed:

Representing the currency commission of the American Banking association: A. Barton Hepburn, New York; James B. Forgan, Chicago; George M. Reynolds, Chicago; John Perrin, Los Angeles, and Solomon Wexler, New Orleans.

Representing the state banking associations: E. J. Hill, Connecticut; Arthur Adams, Texas; George A. Holderness, North Carolina; H. Meehlenpak, Wisconsin; R. S. Hawes, Missouri.

Representing the clearing house associations, R. F. Maddox, Atlanta; Stoddard Jones, Los Angeles; S. D. Pittman, Hamilton, Ohio; E. P. Swinney, Kansas City; Graham G. Lacey, St. Joseph, Mo.

I. W. Foote, of Hattiesburg, Miss., introduced a resolution suggesting an amendment authorizing banks to continue charging exchange fees on checks which are deferred.

Andrew J. Frame, of Waukesha, Wis., expressed the opinion that the new currency bill did not provide for the preservation of the gold standard as the treasury notes were redeemable in gold or other lawful money.

BRYAN GIVES AID IN CURRENCY FIGHT

as well as to trusts—although I think these laws serve," the secretary wrote, "the plan has been considered mainly as a means of dealing with the trust evil. Competition cannot be effectively prevented where the same men act as directors of competing companies.

"I am not as much in favor of the remedy now as I was when I began to advocate it; in fact, more so, because experience during the time given further proof of the employment of this means of eliminating competition. I do not think it wise to make it a part of the pending currency bill. In attempting to make federal legislation, care must be taken not to overload a good measure with amendments, however good these amendments may be in themselves. A boat may be sunk if you attempt to make it carry too much, however valuable the merchandise.

"A bill is usually the result of a compromise. The president and Secretary McAdoo, in conjunction with the chairman of the currency committee of the house and senate, have formulated a tentative measure. It was prepared after extended investigation and the comparison of views. It embodies certain provisions of great importance and is, I believe, fundamentally sound. The provision in regard to the government deposits is right. It is unjust to the banks is the first triumph of the people in connection with currency legislation in a generation. It is hard to ever estimate the value of this feature of the bill.

Provides Government Control.

"In the second place the bill provides for government control of the issue of currency—that is, control through a board composed of government officials appointed by the president with the approval of the senate. This is another distinct triumph for the people, one without which the government control feature of the bill would be largely a barren victory. A third provision of great importance is the one affecting state banks to share with national banks the advantages of the currency system proposed.

"These three provisions are, to my mind, of such transcendent importance that I am relatively but little concerned as to the details of the bill. I do not mean to say that the details are unimportant, but whatever mistakes may be made in details can be corrected easily and soon. A wrong step in the matter of principle would be more difficult to retrace. I take it for granted that no one who really is in favor of the bill will permit a difference of opinion on a matter of detail to lead him to jeopardize the bill.

"The papers this A. m. say a few reported members of congress as presenting views which were alleged to be mine. I do not wish to say that sentiment these reports may exaggerate what has been said and done, but you are authorized to speak for me and say that I appreciate so profoundly the service rendered by the president to the people in the stand he has taken on the fundamental principles involved that I am with him on all the details.

"If my opinion has influence with anyone who applied upon to act upon this measure, I am willing to assume full responsibility for what I do when I advise him to stand by the president and assist in securing the passage of this measure at the earliest possible moment. I am sure that the president will be ready to join in making any change in detail that can be made to advantage, and being sure of his singleness of purpose, I am willing to leave to future action the consideration of any provision which he may now regard as essential to the plan and purpose of the bill."

Democratic members of the senate currency committee today discussed the advisability of holding a brief series of hearings after the bill reaches the senate. If such hearings are given, they will be restricted to the testimony of men invited by the committee to appear.

SETON BLYTH TO PLAY AT AUDITORIUM SUNDAY

T. Seton Blyth, the noted organist of Edinburgh, Scotland, arrived in Atlanta Friday morning on the ten invitation of Colonel W. L. Peel and the Music Festival association and will be the soloist at the first concert at the Auditorium-Armory Sunday afternoon. His program will consist principally of pieces which have never been heard on the organ in Atlanta before.

Mr. Blyth did organ and choir work at Westminster Abbey, London, under Dr. Frank E. Sawyer, and has played in nearly all the large cathedrals in England and Scotland. Mr. Blyth is one of a number of distinguished organists who are here for recitals in Atlanta this fall, from among whom will be selected a successor to Dr. Percy J. Starnes.

Grace Church Revival.

The evangelistic services at Grace Methodist church are being drawn in interest since the opening meeting. Rev. J. M. Bass, who has held large revivals in many places, has shown himself a masterful preacher and the congregations have increased from the beginning Thursday afternoon there was held an illustrated service for children and 300 were present. Thursday night Mr. Bass preached on the "Home," depicting in strong words its opportunities and the modern dangers which threaten it. Dr. Jones has arranged full Sunday services, in which every department of the church shall participate. The evangelist will preach at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m., and men only at 3:30 p. m. he will deliver his famous sermon on "Manhood."

WILL FIGHT TO BREAK WILL OF JUDGE GODBEE

Claim That Third Marriage Invalidated Will Giving Estate to Daughter of Former Wife.

Augusta, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—That the will of the late Judge Walter S. Godbee, who died in this last wife, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee, was shot and killed in Millen last Monday by his former wife, Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, is invalid and will not stand the test of the courts, is the opinion of attorneys, who have been employed by the relatives of the slain woman.

James M. Hull and William H. Fleming, of Augusta, are already having the foundation for a legal battle to break the instrument. They have been employed by Archibald Boyer, brother of Mrs. Florence Godbee.

These attorneys are to try to break Judge Godbee's will on the grounds that he made it in February, 1910, before his third marriage, which marriage, his lawyers claim, invalidated the document.

They claim the estate of his dead third wife is entitled to a large share of his property, as her dower right.

Miss Maggie Godbee, daughter of Judge Godbee by his first marriage, who inherits the bulk of his fortune, valued at between $10,000 and $100,000, has also employed counsel, and expects to fight to a finish against any attempt that may be made to break the will.

Funeral of Young Bride.

Waynesboro, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—The body of Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee was interred at Magnolia cemetery beside her dead husband, Judge Walter S. Godbee, who was buried here on Tuesday.

Relatives and friends from Millen accompanied Mrs. Godbee's body here.

Immediate Hearing Asked.

Millen, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—Suddenly changing their plans counsel for Mrs. Edna Perkins Godbee, accused of the murder of Judge Walter S. Godbee, and her former husband, his wife, Mrs. Florence Boyer Godbee, have asked that she be given a preliminary trial in Millen next Thursday, and R. Lee Wood, the solicitor, has agreed.

GRANT PARK CHILDREN CAPTURE CHAMPIONSHIP

consumed with the races and high jumping contests only about half of the events scheduled were contested yesterday, and the remainder will be fought out between the playground athletes some day next week, according to a statement made last night by Supervisor Joseph W. Bean. The pennant will be awarded to the team, by the Grant park children, as they are far in the lead of all other and will have to come out of the other contests absolutely unnecessary for any of the other playgrounds to stand the slightest chance.

Presents for Children.

Through the courtesy of the Frank E. Block company, Nunnally & Co., T. S. Lewis and Norris & Co. every child at the playground Friday was given a souvenir consisting of a large bag of candy and a box of cakes. The Georgia Railway and Power company also gave a substantial donation to the playground commission for the day.

The events contested, with the names of the winners and Washington Seminary which they represented are as follows:

First event, 50-yard dash for Junior boys, aged 6 to 9: Albert Mitchell, Pine Hill; second, John Burk, Mount Vernon Hotter; Joyner park, second, and Howard McKinley, Grant park, third.

Second event, 50-yard dash for senior boys, aged 9 to 18: Roy Vanadore, Pine Hill, first; Henry Newman, Mims park, second, and Marshall Barrett, English avenue, third.

Third event, 75-yard dash for senior boys: James Wright, Grant park, first; Hubert Carter, Grant park, second, and Marcus Kidd, English avenue, third.

Stella May Young Wins.

Fourth event, 50-yard dash for junior girls, aged 6 to 9: Stella May Young, Joyner park, first; Ruby Earnest, Pine Hill, second, and Roselle Norman, Pine Hill, third.

Fifth event, 50-yard dash for senior girls, aged 9 to 15: Genie Bell, Grant park, first; Mary Joyner, Grant park, second, and Nora Duckworth, English avenue, third.

Sixth event, 75-yard dash for senior girls, aged 9 to 15: Aline Dougherty, Mims park, first; Tonra Barnett, Grant park, second, and Hessie Dempsey, English avenue, third.

Seventh event, high jumping contest for junior boys; high record, 2 feet 8 inches, won by T. Lewis, of Grant park, with F. Freeman, of Grant park, second, and Henry Winn, of Mims park, third.

Eighth event, high jumping contest for senior boys: High record, 4 feet, won by Willie Rice, of Grant park, with Wesley Hall, of Grant park, and Marcus Kidd, of English avenue, tied for second place.

Ninth event, high jumping contest for junior girls: Ivy Chambers, Grant park, first; Genie Bell, Grant park, second, with English avenue, Mims park, Joyner park and Pine Hill tied for third place.

Tenth event, high jumping contest for girls: Hazel Dean, Grant park, first; Clara Jones, Grant park, second; Grant park, English avenue and Mims park tied for third place.

WILKES COUNTY COUPLE FIGHT FOR CHILDREN

Washington, Ga., August 22.—(Special.)—In the domestic relations charges and counterchanges, which have come thick and fast for the past four days between W. L. Hamilton and his wife, Mrs. Minerva Mitchell Hamilton, will commence to be untangled here Saturday. Judge William Wynne, of the superior court circuit, will hear the writ of habeas corpus brought by Hamilton for the custody of his daughter, Lillian. The habeas corpus proceedings came as a sequel to the charges of wife-beating, which were preferred against Hamilton Tuesday evening by his father-in-law, A. L. Mitchell, of Monroe, Ga.

Hamilton is a young farmer of this county. He has instituted proceedings for divorce against his wife.

The new British ambassador is reported to be a baseball fan, which may prove even more influential than proficiency on the tennis court or the golfing green.

AT THE THEATERS.

Jewell Kelley Stock.

(At the Bijou.)

Unusual interest is being manifested in the opening of the popular Bijou theater Monday matinee with the Jewell Kelly company, which will present for the first time in this city a full scenic production of the four-act comedy-drama, entitled "Her Fatal Shadow." A complete production in every detail is promised and the cast, it is said, is a most capable one. The play throughout is said to abound with numerous interesting situations, thrilling climaxes and many comedy scenes. If the advance sale is any indication of the popularity of this well known company and the return of the Bijou to its former policy of presenting full cast plays Monday matinee and night will unquestionably be a record attendance at this popular family theater.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

There are but two more performances of the excellent bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week—the matinee and the night performance today. Boss Campbell's Riding Girls are the features. These stars have been real in the legitimate. They are greater in vaudeville. They are going to present a playlet called "Handkerchief Number 15." It is funny. Two clever people will assist Boss Campbell in production. The Four Regals are going to show some real class in feats of strength. And Dan, too, the Meredith Sisters are going to be interesting in new songs, pretty gowns and attractive scenery.

Moving Pictures.

(At the Grand.)

Kinemacolor motion pictures in nature's own colors will be seen at the Grand theater indefinitely, commencing on Monday. In addition to the Kinemacolor motion pictures, there will be best that are produced, changed daily, there will be several reels of Kinemacolor used daily, and changed every other day. For instance, on Monday and Tuesday the Kinemacolor subjects will be "Tested by Fire," a fire drama, and "Life in a Maori Village, with Sunsets in Egypt." On Wednesday and Thursday the offering will be a three-reel subject, called "The Scarlet Letter," a wonderful picture and the last two days will show an entirely new program.

ROTARY CLUB APPLIES FOR 20 YEAR CHARTER

The recently organized Rotary club applied for a twenty-year charter yesterday, the names of thirty-one citizens being signed to the petition.

In the application it is stated that the club is "to develop and exchange among its members the newest, best and most successful business ideas; to promote progressive and honorable methods in trade; to advance the business interest through the medium of publicity and acquisition and to promote good fellowship by strengthening the ties of friendship."

Americus Market Active.

Americus, Ga., August 22.—(Special.) Three hundred bales of cotton, the new crop received in Americus already, have arrived to ope the cotton season actively and buyers about all offering. One hundred bales arrived today from neighboring plantations. The grade is exciting, and commands highest prices, as no rain has fallen here recently. Rain is needed badly upon young cotton, which constitutes half the crop, and which has taken on no fruit whatever because of drouth.

W. S. ELKIN, JR., HONORED BY THE REXALL CLUBS

Delegates to Boston Convention Present Atlantan With Chest of Silver.

W. S. Elkin, Jr., of the Elkin Drug company, was signally honored Thursday night when the delegates to the Rexall convention, which has been in session in Boston, presented him with a handsome chest of silver.

This gift was presented to Mr. Elkin, president of the Rexall Club of the United States, as a token of the high regard in which the druggists of the country hold him.

Mr. Elkin is one of the best known men in the city of Atlanta. His many friends will be glad to know that he was so signally honored.

Ed Hogan Released.

Ed Hogan, claiming to be an actor from New Orleans and who was arrested Thursday morning by Detective Ed Harper, charged with being insane, was released by Recorder Pro Tem Preston Friday afternoon, when no one appeared against him. Hogan was arrested at the instance of several women who passed him at Five Points Thursday morning and who made charges that the man had stared at them in an offensive manner. The police communicated with the New Orleans authorities, but as no word was heard from them, Hogan was given his liberty.

Inspector Hays Taken Ill.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays is ill at his home, No. 323 South Boulevard, as the result of an attack of illness while seated at his desk on the fourth floor of the city hall Friday morning. Dr. J. P. Hall, city physician, who was summoned, advised that Inspector Hays be taken home. Friends took him away in an automobile. Inspector Hays is apparently suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Wanted—An Offer on 290 Myrtle Street

When a bargain in real estate is put on the market there are always certain conditions that are brought to bear upon the present owner, making it essential that a disposal be made of the property at once. If these conditions were not of a pressing nature the property would never be offered at anything like the present price.

The persons who always come out ahead on these trades are the ones who size up these conditions for what they are worth and take advantage of them at once.

On one of Atlanta's prettiest streets—Myrtle street—we offer a 10-room home on a corner lot, 60x190 feet, faces east and is elevated. This home is absolutely up to date in all respects.

The owner is in such condition that a disposal must be made of this property. Make us an offer and we will submit it, regardless of what it is.

The Consensus of Opinion

Is that we have in Peachtree Heights Park the most beautiful property on the market. The "tone" of the people who are buying lots in Peachtree Heights Park is an absolute guarantee of its great future as the choicest residence park in Atlanta.

Have you driven through the beautifully paved avenues and seen what nature, combined with capital, has done for this magnificent property?
